Better than Pills

PRESIDENT Cleveland was a very busy man after his return to Washington, as that was the first opportunity he had had to confer with members of the cabinet and prominent democrats in Congress since the tariff bill was sent to him, he having been compelled by sickness to leave the White House soon after that measure was sent there. At the cabinet meeting the tariff bill was thoroughly discussed in all its bearings, and it is understood that the cabinet was practically unanimously in favor of allowing the bill to become a law, and several of the members advised the President to sign it at once.
