During a recent conclave of railroad nagnates in New Orleans something sininded a well-known general manmagnates in New Orleans something reminded a well-known general manager of a whimsical story, says the Times-Democrat of that city. "I am afraid there is no particular moral to this yarn," he said, "but it happens to be true, and I'll give it to you for what be true, and I'll give it to you for what be true, and I'll give it to you for what the newspaper boys call 'human interest.' Not long ago the millionaire presdent of a big manufacturing concern up in Ohio made a speech at a banquet, and to illustrate how seeming misfor tunes may prove blessings in disguise he said that he got his start in life through being kicked off of an accommodation train in the dead of winter. It was during the hard times of the '80's, he went on to relate, and al-though a skilled mechanic and something of an engineer, he found it im-possible to procure work of any kind, ven manual labor. Things went from ad to worse, and at last he found himself stranded somewhere in Southern Ohio. He was stone broke and despe ate, and wanted to get to Dayton, where he had heard vaguely there was omething doing in his trade. So on bitter cold evening he slipped on bon an accommodation train, hoping to be able to talk the conductor into carrying him, but he failed ignominiously.

He begged and pleaded, and told his story with all the eloquence of despair, but the ticket puncher refused to melt On the contrary, he pulled the bell rope when they came to the next static grabbed the unhappy young mechanic and propelled him off the car with a series of swift kicks. He landed in a snowbank and slept in a freight shed, but next day his chance came. A span suddenly gave way in a new bridge over a big creek at the edge of the town, and the whole structure threatened to go down before experts could arrive from the builders' foundry. At that critical juncture the stranger jumped into the breach, built a temporary supporting trestle out of like $20,000 worth of work. Of course the bridge people were delighted, and when they saw what a really scientific job he had done they offered the shabby engineer a handsome position in their establishment. From that on his rise was rapid, and, in concluding the little tale, he inid especial stress on the apparent hopelessness of his position the night he was ejected from the train and made the point that one sh never give way to despair. "If that conductor had carried me on instead of kicking me off," he said, "I would have ssed the great chance of my life and might be working now at the bench. I am really indebted to him for my start in the world, and I have often wished that I could meet him and tell
