THE CHANGING SKIES.

[A sonnet.]

Form follows cloudy form across the sky;
In crystal seas float islands of delight;
Grand turrets seem to guard yon mountain's height.
Lo, there the folded flocks of evening lie!
Here roy billows move and, breaking, sigh;
Archangels meet and clash their sabers bright.
See! Scarlet squadrons marshal in the night;
Pale wanderers' lamps the midnight glorify.

In my life's sky dream follows dream of thee;
The wild majestic pageant passes on—
Abodes, defenses, warriors, herds, fair men.
Hands come and grip shape thou my destiny,
Then who remain'st when all the dreams are gone—
My home, my strength, my glory and my peace!

A TRICK OF AH SIN'S.

By M. Quad.

Singapore is a city having dealings in one way or another with every people to the north, east, south and west of it, including all the larger islands. Money reaches Singapore by the boatload and is distributed as liberally. It is a sort of clearing house for the east, and the Malay and the Javanese jostle against the American and the Hollander at the counters of the banking houses.

For five years I was what is called the transfer agent at Singapore. Provided with a steam launch and a trusty crew, I received or sent out all the hard money arriving and departing. Except in case of four or five lines of steamers, no money is received at the wharf. All the native craft lie at anchor to discharge or receive. There are several reasons for this, but the main one is to save time at the banking houses. The money will arrive in bags or boxes and is in copper, brass, silver and gold. It has been counted and tagged, but it must be gone over again. A Malay Chinaman or a Borneo trader would rob his blind grandmother. If he has tagged a box "$1,000," you can be sure that it is short from $30 to $100. Assisted by two clerks, I boarded the craft and recounted, retagged and resealed the treasure and, after giving a certificate of the correct amount, loaded it in the launch and deposited it on shore.

My work was anything but easy. Every consignment carried counterfeit coins to be worked off on me, and every native was up to all kinds of tricks to come out ahead. Under the law I had a great deal of power, but there were scores of ways in which I could be delayed and annoyed. Of all the people I encountered the Chinese were the worst for trickery. There are plenty of honest Chinese traders located at Singapore, as honest as the same number of foreigners, but as to the Chinese afloat I never met a square man. I found each and every one to be the slickest kind of liar and swindler. What purported to be silver bars would turn out to be lead thinly coated, gold ingots would be a deception and a snare, and they would even go to the pains of counterfeiting such cheap coins that it takes 22 of them to make an American cent. It was stipulated in my bond that I should make good all losses arising through any carelessness of counting or handling, and there was never a moment when my vigilance could be relaxed.

Almost at the beginning of my career I had business with a Chinese trader named Whang Ton. That was the name he gave, and he pretended to deal in honest goods, but I have no doubt he was an out and out pirate. He came into the port about three times a year, and he had ten times too much money aboard for an honest trader. He never disputed my count or tried to work off bad coin on me and in this was an exception. He won my gratitude if not my respect in this matter, and after having dealt with him three or four times I ceased to watch him for tricks.

In three years he came into port at least 12 times, and he never brought less than $30,000 worth of stuff. He did not always have the same junk, but his men were always the same. His money was of all nations and all coinage, and it was fair to believe that he robbed all alike. As there were no charges against him I did not think best to say anything ashore, and so Whang Ton arrived and departed without let or hindrance. On what turned out to be his last visit, so far as I know, he brought only about $10,000 to be exchanged, and he informed me that he had decided to leave the sea and settle down ashore. He was more communicative than I had ever known him to be before, but there were only two or three points I remembered afterward. One was his retirement from trade, and the other was about a Philippine craft lying astern of him. She had brought in $28,000 to be exchanged, and I was to put the money aboard of her that evening. He asked many questions about her, as I remembered later, and I answered all as far as I could and gave no weight to the matter.

While I received and shipped mostly between 9 o'clock a. m. and 5 o'clock p. m., it happened now and then that a craft wanted to sail after hours, and so I stretched a point in her favor and charged a percentage. This percentage was to cover my increased risk. In the case of the Philippine craft the money was to be on board at 6 o'clock, which was an hour after dark at that season of the year. It was placed in the launch at 4:30, and I steamed out to a Malay craft and counted and resealed the $28,000 she had aboard. Then I spent 15 minutes talking with the captain of an American whaler and was ready to run down and get rid of my cargo. I had to pass Whang Ton's junk en route, and he was on the lookout for me. He said he had overlooked a box containing about a thousand dollars and was anxious to have it counted and credited with the rest. As he had a basket of wine and a box of cigars for me, I could not well refuse, and I went aboard with my two clerks to rush the count through. Five armed men were left in the launch, and I had no anxiety. We had counted half the money and old Whang Ton was standing by with a grin on his face when five or six natives who had sneaked into the cabin suddenly flung themselves upon us, and we were made prisoners. At the same moment a dozen of the crew dropped over the rail into the launch and made a fierce attack, and in two minutes she was captured and her crew passed up. Then followed the treasure, and as the launch was secured alongside the junk lifted anchor and set sail for the north. The boldness of the trick compelled success. The old pirate smilingly informed me that no one would be hurt and that his only object was the money, and after I had got over swearing and threatening and realized my helplessness we got along fairly well together. It was no one's business to question the junk, and as she had a fair wind she reeled off the miles until midnight and then ran close to the Spanish island and set us ashore and towed our launch after us. Our boat was stripped of arms and coal, and all we could do was to find an anchorage for her and wait to be taken off. It was 3 o'clock next day before this event happened and six hours later when we reached Singapore. Of course a searching vessel was sent out, and later on old Whang Ton was hunted for high and low, but he somehow got clear off with every dollar of that money and settled down somewhere to live on the fat of the land.

"Something New Under The Sun"

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. A Little While.

It is so natural that we fall asleep
Like tired children when the day is done
That I would question why the living weep
When death has kissed the laughing lips of one.
We do not sigh when golden skies have donned
The purple shadows and the gray of night,
Because we know the morning lies beyond,
And we must wait a little while for light.

So when, grown weary with the care and strife,
Our loved ones find in sleep the peace they crave
We should not weep, but learn to count this life
A prelude to the one beyond the grave,
And then be happy for them, not distressed,
But lift our hearts with love to God and smile,
And we, anon, like tired ones will rest
If we will hope and wait—a little while.

Expediency's Injustice.

Expediency! Policy! What injustice is covered by thy somber cloak! The influence of the crowd is the influence which unmakes and demoralizes men today. Our modern life is the life of the crowd, and the individual seems to be losing his identity.—Rev. S. DeLancey Townsend, Episcopalian, New York.

The Gospel the Source of Good.

There is not a country in the world where so much is done in the way of education, reform and philanthropy as in our own country, and we want to see these good things multiply. But we must not lose sight of the fact that the mainspring of it all is in the gospel. —Rev. Frederick E. Hopkins, Congregationalist, Chicago.

O. Buck, Beirne, Ark., says: I was troubled with constipation until I bought DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Since then have been entirely cured of my old complaint. I recommend them. Coos Bay Drug Store.

Her Version of It.

A young girl in a class preparing for admission into the church was asked by the pastor how she ought to obey the fifth commandment, to honor her father and mother. She answered promptly, "I ought to take them out for walks on Sundays, and I ought not to let them see how much more I know than they do." She expressed an opinion probably quite current among young people concerning the preponderance of knowledge in the rising generation.—Congregationalist.

Eruptions, cuts, burns, scalds and sores of all kinds quickly healed by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Certain cure for piles. Beware of Counterfeits. Be sure you get the original—DeWitt's Coos Bay Drug Store.

When Bride and Groom Are Nervous.

Embarrassment appears to be the natural concomitant of matrimony. At least this is true in the incipient stages. Invariably, however, there is a striking contrast between the relative composure of the man and the woman. Both are nervous, but never both at the same time. If they come a week beforehand to make arrangements, she is rattled and he is cool, while on the day of the ceremony she rises to the occasion and he sinks under it. Thus I have never seen a bride who was scared. I have never seen a groom who was not.—Rev. D. M. Steele in Ladies' Home Journal.

Mental Arithmetic.

Wife of Young Literary Man—Why, George, £10 for that magazine story? How long did it take you to write it?

Young Husband (nonchalantly)—Oh, I don't know. A couple of days, I suppose.

Wife (exultingly)—Five pounds a day! That's £30 a week and £120 a month. Twelve times £120 is nearly £1,500 a year. Why, George, we can keep a carriage just as well as not.—London Answers.
