FLEXIBLE RENTS POSSIBLE ON FARM

College Professor Devises a Plan of Unifying Cash Rentals With Income

Use of the farm price index is suggested as a possible means of giving elasticity to cash rental contracts on farms by L. R. Breithaupt, extension economist at Oregon State college, who points out that wide fluctuations in farm prices in recent years have impressed both renters and owners with the need of some less rigid arrangement.

The Oregon farm price index is published each month by the extension service and constitutes a seasonally corrected average of the farm price of 16 commodities that accounted for more than 80 per cent of the farm cash income from crop and livestock production from 1926 to 1930.

Based on Five-Year Period

This five-year period is taken as normal, or 100 per cent. Assuming that a given farm would have rented in normal times at $500, then under prices such as prevailed in 1929 when the index was 109, the rent would automatically raise to $545. But under prices such as a year later when the index was only 84, the figures would be automatically reduced to $420. For October 1931 the index was down to 55, which would put the cash rent in the instance given down to $275.

Such a plan is actually being followed already in some parts of Iowa where such contracts have been written. It has the advantage of removing the element of risk and therefore encourages good farming from a long-time viewpoint which is an advantage to owner, renter and the community generally, Breithaupt explains.

4-H SEWING LEADERS TO HAVE TRAINING SCHOOL

A training school for club leaders in the county in the sewing project has been arranged for Saturday, January 21. The meeting will be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms in Eugene from 10:30 to 3 o'clock. The sewing leaders are being particularly urged to attend this meeting, bring their lunch and stay all day.

Instruction in subject matter work is to be given to leaders by Miss Helen Cowgill, assistant state club leader, in charge of home economics club work.

Included in the instruction will be the conducting of a sewing club selection of materials to be found at home, preparation and use of flour sacks, what to do at club meetings, and a round table discussion. This is the first of a series of meetings that will be held for the leaders in all projects, and will deal to a large extent with subject matter information. Arrangements for the meetings are being made by the county club agent.

Little Emily had been to school for the first time.

"Well, darling, and what did you learn?" asked her mother on Emily's return.

"Nothing," sighed Emily hopelessly, "I've got to go back again tomorrow."

BEST EXPERIMENT RESULTS LISTED

State Station Director Names 10 Greatest Achievements for Agriculture

What he considers the 10 greatest single accomplishments of the Oregon Agricultural experiment station have been listed by Dr. W. A. Schoenfeld, present director of the station who joined the state college staff but recently and hence had no connection with the work he lists as most outstanding. Here is his list which necessarily omits many achievements others might place at the top:

Fruit Cleaning Heads List

1. Discovery of a method of removing spray residue from fruit. This emergency achievement saved Oregon's crops in the crises and is now standard the world over.

2. Discovery of the cause and control of infectious abortion in cattle. The "Oregon system" of control put this state in the front rank in this vital work.

3. Introduction of Federation wheat. This variety, which averages from two to five bushels above others, is now the most widely grown wheat in the entire northwest.

Poultry Results Given

4. Development of the system of breeding poultry for egg production. This revolutionary idea produced the first 300 egg hen and started Oregon's poultry industry.

5. Discovery of life history and control of the codling moth under Oregon conditions. This pioneer work by Dean A. B. Cordley was forerunner of subsequent disease and pest control work that makes commercial fruit growing possible.

6. Development of the Oregon small seed industry through introduction of new forage crops. The industry is based largely on 20 new introductions by the station.

Wheat Yields Increased

7. Improvement of old summer fallow methods in eastern Oregon. This improved system is credited with increasing yields about six bushels per acre.

8. Control of liver flukes in sheep and goats. The station found the snail alternate hosts of the flukes and devised means of eradicating them.

9. Discovery of the value of sulfur as a fertilizer. On alfalfa and other legumes on many Oregon soils hay yields were increased a ton or more per acre.

10. Discovery of a new and simple method of fowl pox control. A new system of vaccination makes unnecessary further losses from this devastating poultry disease.

Dr. Schoenfeld selected these from scores of others listed in a new condensed report on agricultural research accomplishments said to return 10 to 15 million dollars a year to the state. More than 300 problems are now under investigation and more than 100 others requested have been discontinued or not started for lack of funds.

VETERANS PENSION TO BE RADIO TALK SUBJECT

Rice W. Means, former member of congress and now actively opposing members of the National Economy league which seeks to reduce governmental costs by eliminating many of the pensions for veterans including those of the Spanish-American war, will be heard in a national radio address Friday evening from 7:45 to 8 o'clock. Mr. Means will speak on the National Radio Forum hour from Washington, D. C. and his voice will be heard over all Pacific coast stations affiliated with the National Broadcasting network.

Breaks World's Speed Record

Bryan Saulspaugh, well known Northwest auto racer and former holder of world 1 mile circular dirt track record, congratulates Wilbur Shaw at the completion of the trials at Oakland Speedway November 27th when Shaw shattered Saulspaugh's record with a speed of 102.098 miles per hour.

RESEEDING IDEAS COME FROM O.S.C.

Varieties, Time of Planting, and Other Information Are Given for Farmers Here

With much grain and considerable fall sown vetch frozen out by the December cold weather in western Oregon, E. R. Jackman and D. D. Hill of the farm crops department have just issued a series of suggestions in response to many inquiries regarding time, methods and varieties to be used in reseeding. Following are a few of the condensed recommendations made. More details may be obtained from any county agent.

Legume Hay: Success of February vetch planting depends on aphid situation and possible May and June rains. If February seeding is done best bet is to use heavier rate such as 60 pounds of oats and 75 pounds vetch. Disc land before seeding if possible.

Winter Oats: If oat stands are badly thinned it is better to reseed unless remaining plants are vigorous and land is fairly free of weeds. If February seeding is possible, Gray Winter is best, if not, Victory will yield better. The usual rate of fall seeding, 10 to 12 pecks, is followed in February seeding.

Wheat: Rink and Jenkin appear worst injured. Reseeding is best done with same variety if possible. Hodd and Jenkin are probably best for early seeding, and Marquis or Huston for late seeding.

Barley: For early plantings from February to early April, OAC No. 7 has consistently given highest yields except on bottom land. After that, Hannchen. New Ben Beardless is good bottom land variety if seed is available. OAC No. 7 has given better yields than Hannchen on bottom lands from April plantings.

Smut Treatment: Formaldehyde is likely to be unsafe for use in February planting because of delayed germination. For wheat copper carbonate dust is best, and for oats and barley, ceresan.

Corn: On farms where grain is grown solely for home feed and reseeding is necessary, corn is the best bet. It can be grown more cheaply and will yield more pounds of grain to the acre.

Alfalfa: Present situation again emphasizes the value of alfalfa. It can be seeded on fields where grain has frozen out without replowing as a firm seed bed is essential.

Tea was poured during the social hour by Mrs. N. W. Emery and Mrs. L. K. Page.

LEGION AUXILIARY BUSY SEWING FOR NEEDY FOLK

Members of the American Legion auxiliary sewing club sewed several pairs of pajamas and two dresses at their weekly meeting held last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. H. Pollard. The clothing is being made for children of needy ex-service men.
