Washington, Sept. 7—There are more big business men and more big lawyers in Washington these days than ever before. The business men are here trying to find ways to get in under NIRA without changing their present business practices or adding to their costs, and the lawyers are here to find out whether the National Industrial Recovery Act and the other new laws really have teeth in them.

The business men are not having much luck; they get cold comfort from General Johnson, who tells them they've got to play ball. And the lawyers are discovering that these new laws are much like the pre-historic sharks of the Gulf of Mexico, who had forty rows of teeth and a hundred teeth in each row!

Out of their contacts here a good many of these big men—and that means BIG men—are getting some clearer ideas as to what it is all about. Around a dinner table in one of the big hotels a few nights ago several of them, lawyers and businessmen, foregathered with several of the men who are running the show. Out of the eager questioning across the table and back, came as true a picture of the New Deal as has yet been put in words. It came down to about this:

Cause, Effect, Cure

"Whatever the Government of the United States may have been in the beginning, it is now clearly a democracy, in which every man and every woman has an equal voice and every man and woman is entitled to an equal opportunity to make the most of his or her abilities.

"This democracy is in trouble. A large part of its members are in debt, a still larger part unemployed, many are both. This is not due to any fault of their own, in most cases. It is due to the fact that the great business and industrial enterprises upon which most of our people depend for a livelihood have not been run on democratic lines—which is to say, in the interest of their employees and their customers—but as selfish, self-seeking means on the part of managing groups and controlling capital to enrich themselves.

And the plight of the farmer is due to similar failure to apply democratic principles to agriculture; since in a true democracy no one would be allowed to compete unfairly with his neighbor, and the sum total of all productive effort would be limited to the possible total consumption.

"Now, it is up to the members of this democracy, the people of the United tates, to cure these evils. They can only do so through their elected representatives, and the present Administration, having been overwhelmingly elected, has a mandate from the people to bring them out of their troubles.

Citizens Ordered Change

"This is not something imposed upon the people from above. It is what the people themselves, through their elected representatives in Congress, have agreed to impose upon themselves. It is the law of the land and it is Constitutional.

"In an earlier day this extension of the democratic principles was not perhaps, necessary. Land was to be had for the taking, opportunity lay at every man's door to engage in business or industry in his individual way. The corporate era has changed all that. Most of the business of the country is done by corporations which are steadily growing larger and larger. These corporations belong to their stockholders, and their stockholders are, potentially, all the people of the United States. Indeed, almost the only opportunity for the average man to share in the growth and increase in the nation's resources today is by investing his savings in the shares of these corporations.

"That is a perfectly proper and highly desirable thing, but only if the corporations are so managed that the risk of loss through mismanagement, faulty judgment and destructive competition is first eliminated.

Here are the New Rules

"So the Administration is calling upon these business and industrial corporations to democratize their respective industries, first by eliminating unfair competition, so that there shall be a better chance for profits for those who invest in them; second, by opening the doors of opportunity for the worker wider, giving him higher basic wages, shorter working hours, employing more people in proportion to the total business done, and cutting off the high salaries, bonuses and other devices whereby those at the top have profited at the expense of those at the bottom.

"That does not mean that management is not entitled to fair pay, nor that capital shall earn no profits; but it does mean that profits shall be earned only by actual invested capital and not on watered securities, so that the man who invests in corporate shares hereafter will be on an equal footing with all other shareholders.

"It is going to take time. A lot of people who have been getting more than their share are going to balk—are balking now—at the prospect of having to take less while the men lower down get more. But there are teeth in the Recovery Act, in the Securities Act, in the Banking Act, in the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and anyone who does not want his head bitten off had better come into camp and make the best of it.

Voice of the People

"This is not a one-man show. It is the voice of all of the people, or at least the great majority of them, giving orders. So it is a proper and necessary part of the program to make provision whereby the debtor can obtain the money with which to pay his debts and have a hand dealt him in the New Deal, even if to do that means inflating the dollar, issuing bonds which posterity will be taxed for, or in any other way pledging the credit of the United States, of all the people. For if the New Deal succeeds it will put us in a position where these burdens will not be heavy ones; whereas if it fails the Government of the United States is sunk and Fate will chalk up another failure against the record of the world's experiments in democracy."

That is as clear an expression of the principles upon which the United States Government is being administered today as your correspondent has yet heard. Some of the know-it-alls may tell you different; but if the reader will keep that simple explanation in mind he will understand what the day-to-day news out of Washington really means.

Made It Legal

Rochelle Young, Los Angeles, has been in the movies two years. She was offered a major contract and accepted it. But, not yet being of age, she went to court to have a judge approve the contract.

MOST LICENSES REVOKED FOR LIQUOR OFFENSES

Approximately 97 per cent of the 696 licenses cancelled on mandatory charges since 1931 have been taken from persons convicted of operating motor vehicles while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. These persons were not permitted to make application for another license until at least a year had lapsed from the time of conviction; says Hal E. Hoss, Secretary of State.

Nine drivers had their licenses suspended last month for varying periods up to 12 months. All were charged with reckless driving. During the past four months all but one of the 43 suspensions have been made on these grounds. For the 21 months before then, however, more than 40 per cent of the 190 suspensions were due to causes of incompetency other than reckless driving.

YOUNG FOLK IN CHARGE OF CHURCH SOCIAL NIGHT

Young people of the Christian church under the direction of Miss Mina Peterson had charge of the monthly social program at the church last Thursday evening. Included in the program were solos by Merton Ferebee and readings by Mrs. T. H. Peterson and Miss Bessie Cox. About 25 attended.

Visitors included Miss Jewel Cunningham, former pianist at the church who has just returned from Idaho, and Miss Mabel Moffitt of Seattle, a student at the Eugene Bible college.

The usual potluck dinner preceded the social program. Ren Hollister had charge of the devotionals.
