Can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway telegraphy. Since the 8-hour law became effective, and since the Wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of R. R. and Wireless Officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Davenport, Ia., Cincinnati, O., Portlond, Ore., or Memphis, Tenn.

THE HOUSE ON THE HILL

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

The house and the hill were situated in a town in the state of Ohio. The hill is there yet, but there is no house on it. Twenty years ago a stranger went to the town and bought the hill and built a frame house there. When the house was about completed he died. It was a decaying wreck when along came a Mr. Bushwick from no one knew where and bought the property for $100. As soon as he had the deed he offered it to any villager for $300 and was laughed at as weak in the top story.

Failing to effect a sale, Mr. Bushwick had the house put in repair and announced that he intended to live there. He also announced that he should use it as an observatory. Of course the villagers knew what an observatory was. When Mr. Bushwick's telescope and triped arrived and were set up on the veranda he permitted the villagers to have a look—not at the heavens, but at the earth. They could almost see the houseflies in the town beneath their feet.

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Bushwick when all was ready, "the price of this property is $400. It will increase $100 per week until sold."

Of course he was loony, but so long as he appeared harmless the people would only laugh at him. The first one to make a discovery was a Mr. Graham. He was an old man, and he had an old wife. They were always wrangling, more or less. When they had wrangled about so long each time he would box her ears. Two days after the "observatory" had been established and as the old couple sat on the piazza of their house a wrangle took place. After a bit the husband looked around, and, seeing no one passing, he administered a cuff. A moment later he happened to look up on the hill and saw that the telescope was trained upon him. If there was any doubt that Mr. Bushwick had seen that cuff inflicted it was dispelled by the waving of a small white flag.

Elder Thompson was a good man, a very good man, as all elders should be and are. He was sitting in his back yard under an apple tree, thinking how good and peaceful and nice it was to be real good, when a bumblebee came along and lifted him once for his mother's sake. After coming down from his high jump the elder broke down a young cherry tree, tore down a panel of the fence and ran his dog into the house. It was no more than a good man should do, but when he looked up and saw that accusing telescope and white flag he felt hurt and conscience stricken.
