WILSON SETS NEW STANDARD

slowly back upon the pile at his desk.

"I don't know just how I'll answer it yet," he said. "But just now I don't believe I could do Hughes much good by going on the stump."

Colonel McElroy's endorsement of the way the Wilson administration has handled G. A. R. pension affairs should be of particular interest in Ohio. McElroy, himself lived in Ohio for several years, having been edito of the Toledo Blade from 1874 to 1884. C. M. Saltzgabed, whose administration of the pension office McElroy declares the best ever, is a resident of Van Wert. Also, the widow's pension law, which McElroy declares lets a new standing of justice in pension legislation, was introduced and engineered through congress by Congressman William A. Ashbrook of Johnstown, O.

FRENCH WIN VERDUN

Germans. General Petain regarded the front east of the Meuse as too cramped, and suggested to General Nivelle, the commander of Verdun, that he give himself more elbow room. With that end in view infantry was sent up to reinforce the French and artillery was ordered for the establishment of new batteries. The aviation department was commanded to make an exhaustive survey of the positions of the German batteries and points of assembly. This work was carried out and the secret was kept so well that to all appearances the Germans never had an inkling of what was in prospect. Furthermore, they evidently believed the energies of the French were being absorbed by the battle of the Somme and made no preparations to meet a thrust at Verdun. Thus it came about that what was intended for a small maneuver became a brilliant tactical success.

Story of Attack.

The attack was planned for ten days ago. Artillery began preliminary work before the attack was delivered, when four columns of a division met with little difficulty. The attackers carried Thiaumont work and farm and the Haudromont quarries set as the objective, and gained the Douaumont road beyond. There the attackers stopped, having advanced about a mile.

The second column was a colonial division under General Mangin from the corps, which retook Douaumont fort last May. The task assigned to it was to take Hill 320, northeast of Fleury, and the edge of Caillette wood. The offensive there was even more rapid than on the left wing. General Mangin immediately saw he could advance further, and the commanding officer was therefore made to continue the attack. Hill 320 was rushed by troops from Fleury, which approached Caillette wood through the celebrated Ravine of Death. They then crossed the wood and reached the approaches to Douaumont fort. Everywhere the Germans gave way before them. However, the garrison of the fort hurriedly prepared to defend the important point confined to it. French troops surrounded the fort and extended their gains everywhere without an instant's delay, fatigue parties set to work turning the defenses so as to be ready to resist counter-attacks west of the fort, the village of Douaumont had been carried at a run and passed beyond. Meanwhile a stiff struggle went on between the French and the defenders of the fort. The Germans refused to surrender and the French killed nearly all of them before they forced their way into the ruins.

Things went equally well on the right. The third column advanced half a mile, reaching the edge of Vaux pond and carrying the part of the Vaux Chapitre wood still held by the enemy, and Fumin wood. The column stopped north of these woods on the outskirts of the village of Vaux.

Why they're Sensible

OCCASIONALLY, a more heavy, full-powered cigarette than Fatima tastes mighty good. But heavy cigarettes are a little too "oily" and rich to suit most men for long. You are certain to find more comfort in a delicately balanced blend like Fatima. Because Fatimas leave a man feeling keen and fit even after smoking more often than usual. That's why they're sensible. Prove it yourself.

THEDA BARA

As "Cigarette" in Ouida's Master Novel

UNDER TWO FLAGS

IN THIS PLAY MISS BARA PUTS ALL THE FIRE AND PASSION OF HER WONDROUS ART INTO ITS CHARACTERIZATION

Read What the Critics Say:

Motion Picture World—"Theda Bara has given us the best work of her career in the interpretation of the dashing, fearless Cigarette. Her wonderful versatility of countenance is irresistible and we venture to predict that this role will become her most popular character portrayal

New York Telegraph—"Under Two Flags" should give complete satisfaction. It is a well produced adaption of the popular classic; it features Theda Bara and allows her to get away from "vampirism," and yet gives her a chance for brilliant work; and it presents a vigorous and imaginative story, something not found in every screen play.

"WID," Bradstreet of Fildom, says: "For one thing, this film stands as a personal triumph for Miss Bara. She gives a characterization as 'Cigarette' which will never be forgotten because of the buoyant enthusiasm and vivacious personality which she registers in perfect freedo mfrom anything theatrical. She gets into the part wonderfully well, and surely her 'Cigarette' will long be remembered.
