A NEWSPAPER SCOOP

HOW IT WAS OBTAINED WITHOUT ANY DEPARTMENT LEAK.

Sources of Information of Which the Alert and Quick Witted Correspondent is Always Ready to Take Legitimate Advantage.

'Every once in awhile one reads in the newspapers of the determination of some one of the high government officials to discover the source of the leak of a piece of news which it was not desired should be given out at that particular time.'

'Some time ago—the precise time is not essential to the story—a very important public matter was up for determination by the president. All of the larger metropolitan dailies were particularly interested, as it did not have to do especially with Washington, and the entire correspondents' world at the capital was on the qui vive to 'get it,' including myself.

'I had about given up hope of securing a 'beat' in this particular instance, though I was, of course, as vigilant as ever. The time for the maturing of the project was close at hand, and any day it might by official announcement become public property.

'The president,' remarked one of the gentlemen, 'said that it was his intention to adopt that course irrespective of the consequences either to himself or the party.'

'But you pointed out to him what it meant to us—that he was clearly in error?' replied the other gentleman. 'Elaborately,' responded the first speaker, 'but the president said that he was convinced that accruing results would prove that we, and not he, were in error.'

'Then we may as well go back to New York tomorrow,' was the answer, and both gentlemen arose and walked toward the cafe, apparently in a very despondent frame of mind.

'I was an involuntary listener to this scrap of conversation, in which, it will be observed, not a single word was dropped as to the subject matter thereof. I at once jumped to the conclusion that the government, through the president's action, intended to take the affirmative of the proposition, the news side of which the correspondents had so long and earnestly endeavored to ascertain.

'In the furtherance of my conclusion my paper had the 'beat' of the season the following morning, as I stated the facts as though they came from official sources, as, indeed, such I considered them. To my mind, as a correspondent, it was as clear as if the president himself had given me the information. Two days after a member of the cabinet gave out officially what I had wired over and with it the announcement that the 'leak' had occasioned much annoyance, and its source would be investigated thoroughly. It is here given correctly for the first time.—Washington Star.

Jerry Wedding Bells.

Wednesday, Nov. 12, was a day long to be remembered at Marquam, the wedding bells gave out no uncertain sound. The most unique wedding that Marquam has ever witnessed took place at the M. E. church.

The contracting parties were Miss Elsie J. Taylor and Joseph A. Van Cleave, both of this place, Miss Ella Ingram acting as bridesmaid and Mr. Lester Van Cleave groomsmen. Little Orleane and Mildred Jones were the flower girls, strewing the path with flowers. The church was most beautifully and artistically decorated and brilliantly lighted.

At 5:30 the guests began to gather and at 7 the church was crowded to the utmost, even standing room being at a premium. At 7 the bell began ringing, just as the bridal company left the parsonage. As the company reached the door, Mrs. E. P. Morcom, of Woodburn, started up the "Mendelssohn Wedding March." The couple were received at the altar by Rev. T. C. Butler, of Salem, who performed the ceremony.

The bride was dressed in white satin. After congratulations were extended the bridal party started for Woodburn, where they intended to take the train for Portland, Seattle and other Sound points, returning home after a week's trip. Their many friends at Marquam extend their hearty congratulations to the happy couple. WITNESSES.

I was suffering agonies from piles and was taking morphine to relieve me, when, on the advice of a friend, I procured a bottle of your Perrin Pile Specific and took a tablespoonful at night and another in the morning. At half past twelve, noon, my wife gave me another tablespoonful, when I again all stopped. In two days my business entirely relieved. It was simply wonderful. JULIUS METZGER, December 11, 1902.
