The Merchant's Grumph.

"Yes," remarks the cynical humorist, "I could be a newspaper reporter. I could certainly have a snap. The whole sale houses would be glad every month to send me a check for $5.00 if I send them all the business I can. In addition many manufacturers would make my stay in Chicago very pleasant if I would only write up their goods. Why, I can hardly turn around without being invited to some place where I can get something free. The merchants in my town would be willing to pay me a good salary to write up their goods instead of giving the money to the mail order houses. If I contribute money to any cause people say I am holding up the church if I don't they say I am a hog. Every day I am expected to give up for every hog that comes along, from a raffle ticket to a church fund. The people who say I ought to give this benefit they do part of their trading here. But no friend, Montgomery, Ward, neither buys raffle tickets nor helps the church fund, and yet he gets the cash in advance business, and if I were to circulate a subscription paper among the city wholesale houses where we trade I would get the horse laugh proper. If I sell a pair of pants I must treat the family to candy and cigars, if I buy a load of potatoes I must do the same. Customers who are able to pay hang on to their money while I pay ten per cent at the bank to get ready cash. I have a big business during hard times and poor crops from people who are willing to trade with me providing I can duplicate catalogue house prices and wait until after harvest for my money. My scales weigh too heavy when I sell sugar and too light when I buy better. I am a thief, a liar, and grafter If I smile I am a soft-soapy hypocrite, if I don't I am a grump. Yes, this is certainly a snap." And then he looks over $10,000 worth of book accounts, all good, and wondered how he could raise $350 to pay a sight draft due tomorrow.—Ex.

Bent Her Double.

"I knew no one, for four weeks, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter, of Pittsburg, Pa., "and when I got better, although I had one of the best doctors I could get, I was bent double, and had to rest my hands on my knees when I walked. From this terrible affliction I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." Guaranteed to cure stomach, liver and kidney disorders; at Lee Beall's drug store; price 50c.
