NEAR $1,500,000 NEEDED BY STATE

Cost of Running Oregon's Government Placed at High Figure

Salem, Or., Dec. 31--An estimate appearing in the Secretary of State's report which will be scheduled in a short time shows that, with deficiencies, it will cost $1,424,871 90 to conduct the affairs of the state for the next biennial period, this being exclusive of the cost of the state institutions, what special appropriations may be made by the Legislature and of $17,000 certificates of indebtedness.

The estimate for the cost of conducting state institutions falls to the legislative committee and does not come under the province of the Secretary of State. The cost for the last two years, inclusive of the institutions, was $3,018,037.51.

The total amount of deficiency which will face the coming Legislature is $137,231.90. One of the principal amounts in this total deficiency is $30,000 for the public printing fund It is estimated in addition that this fund will require $120,000 during the next biennial period. In addition to the deficiencies shown above deficiencies will appear before the end of the year in the salaries of officers, general expenses Ore. Oi State Insane Asylum, Oregon State Penitentiary, salaries of Circuit Judges, salaries of District Attorneys and deputies and transportation of the insane.

There is a possibility of small deficiencies in other funds, as balances in some of them are not large. It is stated in the report that the increase in cost of supplies and material and, in the case of some institutions a greater increase than expected in the number of patients are all causes for these deficiencies.

It is shown that there are unclaimed bank deposits outstanding in state banks to the amount of $15,407 650, 30 banks returning statements to the Secretary along the line. It is recommended that an appropriation of $3000 be made to cover claims of veterans of the Indian Wars of 1855-56.

One of the salient recommendations in the report deals with information concerning Oregon's resources. Attention is called to the pamphlets published by many of the western states in which resources are shown and the Secretary states in his opinion it is one of the best and most profitable sources of publicity that could be devised.

In speaking of various receipts he mentions the inheritance tax from which was realized $113,123.24 during the past two years; license fees $153,385.74, and a total for all fees for the two years of something over $725,000 as compared with $635,070.03 for the preceeding two years.

Legislation recommendations are made in reference to the automobile license law and to the trademark law. It is suggested that the present law be changed and certificates of registration and tag numbers be issued annually and also provision made for a special certificate and tag for dealers to be used on demonstration cars.

Lower State Levy

Salem, Dec. 31—Although it probably will be some time next week before the final state tax levy is made up, it is safe to state that the levy will not exceed two mills and may be a shade under that amount. Basing this on an estimated valuation of $830,000,000, the two mill tax will raise $1,600,000 for state purposes.

This is a decrease in the state levy from last year of two-tenths of a mill, but will increase the amount of taxes by nearly $132 000. State tax Commissioner Galloway says the odd years have been productive of greater amount from taxation than the even years, according to the reports of the state board of equalization.

The levy of two mills for 1911 will be less than for any year of the past five years, save in 1908, when it was a trifle less than two mills and there is a possibility that it will go even lower for 1911 than for 1908, when the final figures are made up, but Commissioner Galoway declares, with assurance, that it will not be higher than two mills. As a comparison showing the conditions during the past five years and the ratio of the taxes raised, assessed valuation and the levies for the various years, a table will be made up. The assessed valuation of the years previous in each case will be shown.

TEST CASES ON FOREST GRAZING

Secure Permits Before Turning Your Stock on National Forests

Washington, December 31—The authority of the Secretary of Agriculture to prevent the grazing of livestock on the National Forest without a permit has been sustained in New Mexico by action of the Federal courts in three cases in which the defendants had caused or permitted stock to trespass upon the Alamo Forest in defiance to the regulations

Because of the relief which has been current among stockmen during the last year that the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture with regard to grazing on the National forests are unenforceable, the New Mexico cases are regarded by the officials of the Department of Agriculture as particularly timely and valuable The recent disposition to question the validity of the regulations has evidently been due to the natural desire of the stockmen to assert what they supposed, though mistakenly, to be their rights under the law as interpreted by the courts. Secretary Wilson considers that the effect of the action taken in the New Mexico cases will be to clarify the situation materially, and to promote better understanding of the legal rights of the Department.

The misconception which has led stockmen to suppose they might graze their stock on the National Forests without taking out a permit and paying the grazing fee, was due to the decision rendered by the Supreme Court of the United States district court for the southern district of California, by Judge Wellborn, that violation of the grazing regulations is not punishable as a crime. This decision of the Supreme Court, however, was by an even division of the Justices, and therefore did not decide the general question one way or the other, but merely affirmed the decision of the lower court in the particular case The Supreme Court has granted a re hearing of the case, in order that the question may be passed upon by a full bench and authoritatively settled, and its re hearing will soon take place. But the authority of the Secretary to prevent grazing except in accordance with his regulations does not, it is pointed out, depend upon affirmation of the power of the Government to punish violation of the regulations as a crime This is made clear by the action in two of the New Mexico cases, while the third case illustrates the fact that the affirmation of Judge Wellborn's decision by the Supreme Court has no binding force in cases other than the particular one then before the court.

In the cases of Sam Cope and S. O. Cope, defendants, and of G. W. Jernigan, defendant injunctions were granted by the Federal district court to prevent the continued grazing of stock owned by the defendants upon the National Forests. The ground upon which these injunctions were granted was not the power of the Government to punish violators of the regulations through criminal procedure, but was the right of the Government to bring civil action against the owners of stock which trespass upon the property of the Government. In the Cope case punitive damages were imposed by the court for wilful trespass, in addition to an award of $75 for actual damages sustained. The amount of the actual damage was determined by the finding of the court that the value of the grazing privilege in the Alamo National Forest was $1.50 per year for each head of cattle or horses.

Engineers Get Increase

Chicago, Dec. 21—The wage dispute between the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and 61 railroads west, north and south of Chicago was settled today and there will be no strike as consequence.

Instead the engineers will get an average increase of 10½ per cent on their 1910 wages scale, giving them a Christmas present which will average approximately $192 for each of the 33,000 men involved.

This is prize year for Oregon, and the taking of premiums at outside shows seems to have no end. Hood River not only took the first prize at Spokane for apples but followed it up with capturing the sweepstakes at Chicago in competition with the whole country. Medford took first prize at the Canadian National Apple Show at Vancouver, B. C., a Madras man took first honors at the Dry Farming Congress at Spokane with an exhibit, and now comes a Heppner stock breeder who receives the highest average price paid for Shorthorn cattle at the International Livestock show at Chicago. One two-year-old heifer sold for $675. The average price recieved was $380.
