NEED A STORE HOUSE TO HOLD SURPLUS BOOZE

NEW YORK, May 10.—Whiskey, whiskey everywhere, but not a drop to drink paints a paraphrase picture of every police station in New York City.

It has been thus since the recent day when the police department set out to help the federal government make the wet spots in the metropolis evaporate. Each of the 11,000 bluecoats is a prohibition enforcement officer instructed to gather evidence against Volstead Act violators.

They go forth daily to gather it in bottles, in flasks, in cases, in kegs and even in barrels. But there is no warehouse in which to store the liquor until the day when it is brought into court. So the lieutenant at each police station is guardian over the stock accumulating in his precinct.

Many of the stations were looking like ill-kept saloons a few days after the police began mopping up the spots where spirits were spilt. Bottles were hid in desk drawers, behind radiators and under cover of blankets in unused corners. Each day the lieutenant checked up the stock on his arrival and again on departure from duty. Soon the city hopes to arrange for a storehouse.

The city chemist was even harder hit than the police by the new duties imposed by legislators at Albany. Into his test tubes a sample of every bottle, every case and every keg must go for inspection. If he finds in the specimens the stuff that pink elephants are made of, it is labeled "evidence," and awaits court action. Moreover, the chemist must go to court with the liquor and give his official testimony as to its potency.

Ancient Pompeians had both primary and general elections, similar to those we have in every town and city each spring. They were in the midst of an exciting local election, it is indicated, when Pompeii was destroyed in 79 A. D.

There Will Be No Warning

the day before a gusher is struck

IT WILL NEVER BE POSSIBLE for us to announce in an ad that "TOMORROW a gusher will come in and TODAY is the last chance you will ever have to buy oil stock in Klamath at ground floor prices."

Of course it would be nice if you only could know just what day the drill was going to tap the big pool. But you can't. You've got to guess. And a lot of people are guessing that its going to be mighty soon. (Those who have been out to the Siemens well in the last few days seem very sure of it.)

If you want to be sure of buying at present prices and want to be sure of long-shot profits, get in and TAKE A chance Now.

IT WILL BE NO USE TO "SEE KELLEY" AFTER OIL IS GUSHING. He will have no stock to sell then. And neither will anyone else, AT TODAY'S prices.

Make as big a bet as you can, right now. Make a Ten Dollar bet, anyhow.
