Solons Split Over Speech

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Truman struck a generally responsive note in Congress Wednesday with his call for a continued build up of U. S. defenses but the members found much to criticize or praise—depending on individual leanings—in other parts of his State of the Union message.

Democrats who have supported his domestic and foreign policies all along lauded it as a great message. Many Republicans called it chiefly a campaign document.

Senate Democratic Leader McFarland (Ariz.) said "It was a very constructive message. It will give us plenty of food for legislative thought at this session."

Sen. Millikin (R.-Colo.), chairman of the Senate GOP conference, said, "It was a hash of acceptable sentiments, of repudiated proposals and a repetition of tired words."

Senator Taft of Ohio, a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, told reporters he might issue a statement later, but had no immediate comment.
