California Approve School Programs

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Californians voted on Nov. 4 for new millions for their schools — both for building them and running them.

One ballot proposition, originated by the legislature, calls for the issuance of 185 million dollars in bonds. The money will be loaned by the state to districts needing larger or new schools. An initial 250 million dollar issue voted two years ago has been distributed.

Another proposition increases state school support money to districts for $120 to $180 per pupil per year. It is estimated it will cost the state anything from 70 to 160 million dollars a year. State officials say new or higher taxes will be needed. Sponsors of the proposition say they will not.

Both measures passed overwhelmingly.

One of the warmest campaigns and also one of the closest vote counts also concerned schools.

By a margin of only about 12,000, the voters passed a proposition giving property tax exemption to private non-profit schools below the college level.

The legislature voted overwhelmingly to exempt them last year but opponents landed a referendum measure on the ballot.

The campaign revolved around church and state issues, as parochial schools are the chief beneficiaries.

California has been the only state without the exemption.

Voters passed by more than 2 to 1 a pair of anti-subversive propositions.

One prohibits the employment or benefit or any tax exemption for a person who advocates the overthrow of the government by force. The other writes into the constitution a law requiring a loyalty pledge from state, county and city employees.

Californians also decided to stick by the cross-filing law relating to primary elections.

Under it a candidate can run for the nomination of other parties besides his own.

A candidate who wins both major party nominations, as Sen. William F. Knowland did, has what amounts to election in the primary.

Opponents of repeal said it would result in "bossism;" proponents said a ban on cross-filing would increase party responsibility. The vote was close. The voters passed another proposition which requires a cross-filing candidate to list his own party affiliation after his name on the primary ballot.

The voters gave a decisive but not a landslide "no" vote to propositions authored by Los Angeles Pension Promoter George H. McLain.

One would have reorganized once more the state Social Welfare Department, shifting old age pension administration from county to state control, tying pensions to the cost of living and providing a maximum of $150 for funerals.

The other McLain measure would have banned legislative lobbying by semi-public organizations.

Four years ago Californians voted yes on a McLain proposition which reorganized the social welfare department, even to the extent of giving a McLain aide the director's job. They voted it out a year later.

ARRIVES. The Duke of Windsor (above) has arrived in London from Paris, visiting with his mother, Queen Mary. He has called on the Queen Mother and plans for a visit with Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh. These activities led court circles to speculate the Duke as well as the Duchess of Windsor will be invited to the coronation of Queen Elizabeth.

Officials Fear Teacher Lack

WASHINGTON (AP)—There will be 27,533,054 public school students enrolled throughout the United States this school year, says the National Education Association.

The association, a national professional organization of educators, said in a report yesterday that this means an increase of about 821,000 over the last school year.

To handle this hike in enrollment, about 25,700 extra teachers are needed, and state and local units are spending 370 million dollars more than a year ago.

A shortage of teachers is indicated, the association said, adding they are still low paid in comparison with persons of other occupations—an average of $3,405 a year, up 5 per cent over the previous year.

CASUALITY LIST

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Defense Department today identified 89 battle casualties in Korea in a new list (No. 698) that reported 20 killed, 60 wounded, eight missing and one injured.

Today's Women

BY DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

Mamie Eisenhower is expected to give a lift to the fashion industry.

Business is popping down in the caverns of New York's Seventh Avenue this week, as buyers by the thousands crowd into showrooms to order next spring's fashions; a new spirit of optimism is apparent among the manufacturers, and first reports show a solid increase in orders for spring merchandise throughout the country.

Women's Wear Daily, the "buyer's bible," predicts a rosy future for the fashion business as the result of "a first lady who also is a real influence in the fashion world."

Certain it is that the next first lady knows her frocks and hats, and uses her own good taste in selecting them. Her wardrobe is made up of both French and American models, and she is as likely to buy a dress she likes for $50 as she is to order an exclusive custom-made one. What pleases the moguls of the nation's 11 billion dollar fashion industry is that Mrs. Eisenhower can be counted on to wear either with an air.

The millions who cheered Mamie during the campaign tour noted that she always was well groomed, in simple little suits or dresses of good lines and flattering cut, that her hats were right and her gloves spotless, that she managed to achieve that ideal state of looking "well-hung together."

At tonight's gala fan ball, at the Plaza Hotel, New York society will get a close-up view of the next first lady, honorary chairman, whose gown for the event may be expected to set the trend for the season's formal wear.

For everyday wear Mrs. Eisenhower has a preference for feminine lines, full skirts, fitted bodices and flattering necklines. She is a petite size 12, looks younger than her 56 years, and has been described as "that rare phenomenon, a grandmother who looks wonderful in a strapless dress."

One New York designer, from whose line Mrs. Eisenhower selected a number of outfits at the start of the campaign, describes her as "a designer's dream, who has a divine figure, loves clothes and knows how to wear them."

The next first lady is not a spendthrift. She is a canny shopper, and gets her money's worth. She is said to have decided that Paris clothes were too expensive for a whole wardrobe, and that she could find things just as flattering and far less costly back in the good old USA.

Italians Claim Strong Army

ROME (AP)—The Ministry of Defense claims Italy will go into 1953 with the strongest army in Western Europe.

That army, the ministry says, will have a fighting firepower equal or superior to the equivalent number of British or American divisions.

Most of the new firepower has been gained by a switch, under the American arms aid program, from old British and Italian to modern U. S. arms.

American military observers and U. S. correspondents who have seen Italy's latest military parades and maneuvers report noticeable strengthening in Italy's armament—but have seen nothing to equal either British or American division firepower.

These observers point out that even under arms aid, the Italian Army is still not getting America's latest model jet fighters, tanks, big Bazookas or automatic weapons.

The Defense Ministry, however, says conversion to these is "rapidly under way."

It reports that by the start of 1953, Italy will have 10 infantry divisions, two Alpine brigades and two armored divisions.

Foreign observers here say, however, that only six or seven of the 10 infantry divisions are actually up to NATO standard strength in arms.

The ministry gives this comparison:

"The Italian infantry division has 19,271 individual arms, 734 collective arms, 347 pieces of artillery, 10 armored cars and 18 light weapons carriers.

"The United States division is inferior to the Italian in individual arms, equal in artillery, but superior in collective arms and weapons carriers.

"Personnel for all three infantry divisions is the same—about 18,500 men."
