Champ Wheat Grower Here

NEW YORK (AP) — The champion wheat grower of Britain, J. M. (Dick) Turrell, who farms 220 acres in Lincolnshire, arrived Tuesday on his way to see how they grow wheat in Oklahoma.

Turrell, accompanied by a neighboring farmer, will visit Robert J. French who annually harvests 2,000 acres of wheat on a large farm near Boise City, Okla. They arrived on the Cunard liner Queen Mary.

Last year Turrell and his brothers produced a world record yield of 125 bushels per acre on their farm near Norfolk. They planted 70 acres in wheat, but the big yield came mainly from nine especially productive acres, he said.

Turrell credited his success to "a good piece of land, perfect seed and ideal growing conditions in the weather point of view."

But he does not expect to repeat the performance this year. The wheat bulb fly is damaging crops in his section of the country, he explained. Unless farm experts learn to control the pest, farmers in the area may have to stop growing wheat, he said.

Electric Shocks To Brain Now Used To Ease Pain In Patients; Wires Used

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Reporter

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Human brains are being wired inside to produce tiny shocks to banish terrible pain or to treat mental illness.

Two to eight electric wires are planted as deep as three inches inside the brain. Any pair of wires can be hooked to a machine to carry a slight electric current through chosen parts of the brain. The currents seem to dynamite hormones into action.

The wires have brought one bedridden woman freedom from the incessant pain of hopeless cancer. Dr. Robert G. Heath, professor of psychiatry and neurosurgery at Tulane University Medical School, said today.

She has not needed morphine for six weeks, is up and about, eager to see a movie.

Thirty mental patients have had the brain wiring in the last three years, but Dr. Heath declined to discuss those results now.

He described this significant new attack upon pain to science writers ending a tour sponsored by the American Cancer Society. He stressed that the work is still very preliminary.

The tiny currents apparently profoundly affect the chemistry of the human body, presumably affecting body glands and hormones.

The wires are implanted through two little holes made in the front, top part of the skull. A fluoroscope machine guides the surgeon in putting each wire at selected spots. The brain end of each wire has a tiny bulb or electrode.

The outside ends of the wires are soldered to sockets, which are incorporated into a big head bandage. There is no discomfort, the wires can be withdrawn anytime later.

Any pair of wires can be used either to record brain waves electrically, or to send the currents from one electrode to another through part of the gray matter.

Dr. Heath showed a dramatic movie of pain relief won by the woman whose cancer had spread through her pelvis. Shots of morphine brought relief for only two hours.

But as soon as the current—two milliamperes or two 1,000ths of an ampere—was turned on, her pain was gone. She said she felt good enough to go to work. When the current was increased to four milliamperes, she felt dizzy. At slightly higher current, her blood pressure rose.

The treatments kill her pain for a week or 10 days, then she has another electric stimulation. She has gained six pounds, eats well, now needs only aspirin occasionally to relieve sciatic pain.

The current is passed through her hypothalamus, a region of the brain which, by some evidence, may be the real master gland area of the body.

The treatments bring noticeable chemical changes, Dr. Heath said. The number of different kinds of white blood cells changes, and there is an increase in certain hormone products in the body. The hormonal changes are similar to a large dose of ACTH, the hormone produced by the pituitary gland in the brain.

Exactly what happens is not yet clear, he said. The brain wiring was tried because hormone treatments often help relieve pain.

Brain wiring is being studied in mental patients because of evidence of physical and chemical changes in people who suffer mental illnesses. All 30 mental patients are victims of schizophrenia, or so-called split personality.

Power Farming Proves Big Step In National Security

Power farming has been a great contributor to national security and to the advancement of agricultural production, says Paul L. Maloney, Nevada State 4-H Club leader.

A single farm worker today can produce food and fiber for 15 nonfarm workers, largely because of machinery. Because of this machinery, Maloney points out that proper maintenance is vital to the nation.

To show how important tractor maintenance is, Maloney points to the amazing loss of fuel by U.S. farmers. A 1,000 mile long string of tank cars loaded with tractor fuel is lost every year in the U.S. by farmers driving tractors with poorly adjusted carburetors. A railroad train that long would stretch from Reno to Denver.

The 4-H Club live-power tractor maintenance projects are designed to help cut this loss. Lessons learned by 4-H youth are applied immediately in the daily use of farm tractors.

This program is usually considered a project for rural youth. However in this state classes are being attended by city boys interested in obtaining jobs on farms and ranches in Nevada during summer months, Maloney stated. Such jobs are plentiful and a knowledge of tractors is especially useful now when large numbers of farm boys are being drafted.

Goals established by the Nevada 4-H Club State advisory committee is to have a tractor maintenance club in every county in the State, Maloney stated. Virginia SCity was recently site of the first State tractor maintenance club made up entirely of non-farm boys, to complete the first year's tractor maintenance work. Some of the boys in this group drive as much as 28 miles for each maintenance lesson, showing the interest the programs are creating, Maloney said.

Civil Rights Bill Signed

SALEM (AP) — The Civil Rights Bill was signed into law Tuesday by Gov. Paul L. Patterson, and it will become effective July 21.

It prohibits hotels, restaurants, taverns, amusement places and other firms from discriminating against anybody because of his race or religion. Persons who are discriminated against could sue for up to $500 damages.

Other bills signed Tuesday will:

Let growers of farm crops set up their own commodity commissions to promote the sale of and research in their crops.

Create the office of legislative counsel to draft bills and revise the laws.

Correct the error in the new law code which extends unemployment insurance to employes of firms hiring fewer than four persons.

GETS GOAT

CHULA VISTA, Calif. (AP) — Has the neighbor's dog ever got your goat?

It happened to E. F. Donusco here, only the goat was real instead of just a figure of speech.

He said it was killed by Robert P. Rush's dog. Rush was ordered to replace the goat, or pay Donusco $15.

PORK AND BEANS

Warm weather and picnic plans mean you'll be serving pork and beans more often. Good way to put the beans in "fancy dress" is this: Brown ¼ cup of minced onion in 1 tablespoon butter or margarine; then stir in 1 can (1 2-3 cups of pork and beans in tomato sauce. Add 1 tablespoon each of molasses and prepared mustard. Sprinkle in a dash of cloves. Heat over low heat about 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. See how the 3 join up with a platter of hamburgers or hot dogs.

Todays Women

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

As a cure for the national divorce problem, Will Gerber suggests:

"Give your mother-in-law a parakeet. Then she'll have something to love, and won't have to be jealous of the daughter or son-in-law who has robbed her nest."

A dealer in all kinds of animals from elephants to canaries, Gerber explains:

"Everybody wants to be loved, and the little, brightly plumed parakeet is chock full of love. If you give him a chance to show it. He'll perch on your shoulder, come with you to the breakfast table, keep you company while you're washing the dishes and talk to you when you're lonely. He's a perfect companion for invalids, elderly people and lonely women."

This is the reason, he says, that U. S. citizens are buying 10,000 parakeets a week nowadays—more than a half million a year. At an average price of $10 each, that's five million dollars worth of the little love birds or "budgies", as they also are called. Add to this the sale of cages, food, toys and gadgets in which parakeet owners invest, and you have probably a $50 million industry.

It's easy to teach a parakeet to talk, if you start early and have plenty of patience, says Gerber. Many develop vocabularies of 200 words, by no means limited to the "pretty-wants-a-cracker" routine. Here's how to do it:

"Begin when your parakeet is from 4 weeks to 9 months old. You can't teach him to talk until he is tame. The quickest way to do this is through the stomach. Take the food from his cage at night, in the morning tempt him with a few seeds adhering to your finger. Use easy gestures. If he is hungry enough he will eat from your finger. If he doesn't, try it again the next morning. When he hops to a finger to eat you'll know you're having success.

"Right from the beginning select one word or two to say to him, clearly and distinctly. Always say the same word or words. Keep saying the same phrase over and over. Let everyone in the family address him with the same word or phrase.

"When at last he speaks, the words may be blurred. But keep repeating them, and with each attempt he will speak more clearly. Remember that the most difficult step in training a parakeet to talk is getting him to say the first clear word. After that add new words two or three at a time, and before you know it you'll have a talking parakeet."
