MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The Coast Guard cutter Androscoggin raced to the aid of a Honduran ship today that reported it was in "sinking condition" with 13 men aboard.

"WE'S REGUSTED" with the type of campaigning being carried on by the Democratic "big guns" and "little guns" says
Charles A. Sprague
Noted Liberal Editor of the Oregon Statesman, Salem, Oct. 12, 1954

It's time we got some sense in this campaigning. Democratic big guns and little guns are laying down such a barrage on "give-away" that an utterly fantastic portrait of Republicans of known integrity is being fashioned. They picture these public servants as giving away the natural resources of the country, shamelessly and recklessly. They dress up Guy Cordon in a pirate suit and Douglas McKay too, virtually classifying them as yeggs out to plunder the public domain. Those who know these men know they are men of high character, conscientious in the performance of their public duty, not subject to ulterior influence.

Here is Oscar Chapman, former Secretary of the Interior, who says the Republicans have given the country an administration by "gift, grab and golf." Richard Neuberger, trying to grab Cordon's seat, says the senior senator evidently "plans to turn over the National forests and national parks to big-timber monopolies." And Senator Morse pursuing his vendetta against his colleague and McKay, brands them as virtual traitors to the public interest. It is propaganda, which gravely distorts the careers of these officials.

The major "crime" alleged is the transfer of title to offshore oil lands to the states. Historically the states had utilized these resources for decades with no question as to their authority. Later the Supreme Court did vest title in the hands of the federal government, but Congress felt in view of the history of state utilization and the terms on which Texas was annexed that the states should be restored to the authority they had exercised. The Statesman preferred to have them retained by the government with generous share of royalties going to the adjacent states. But the divested resources still are in public hands, and are administered for the use and benefit of the people of the coastal states.

These critics of Cordon do not abuse him for his work on the O & C lands, which extends over a long term of years. Perhaps that is a "giveaway" too, with the counties being cut in for 75% of the proceeds. Cordon and Ellsworth finally obtained a settlement on the controverted lands question—and again the counties are to share 75% of proceeds from these lands which never had been on the tax rolls, and on which the counties had not the slightest legal claim. These vocal Democratic spokesmen are singularly silent about this "giveaway." (While counties had no legal claim on the controverted lands they are put to heavy expense in maintaining roads which service them and so are entitled to compensatory payments from the government.)

Voters might well remember this, that Cordon was a chief architect of the 1937 bill which set up the administration of O & C lands. That bill carries as an essential provision a requirement for the management of those lands on a sustained yield basis. That insures to the O & C counties in perpetuity a substantial annual income which now amounts to over $6,000,000 a year. He has labored steadily to protect the interest of the people of Oregon in these lands. He has worked also to obtain funds for access roads needed to bring the timber to market at prices fixed by competitive selling.

As far as giveaways are concerned the whole New Deal and Fair Deal record was one of giveaway, from paying farmer for plowing under the pigs to subsidies for silver and boondoggling and "gentle rain of checks."

Like Amos and Andy "we's regusted" with this type of campaigning. Cordon and McKay are not pirates and not dumb tools of special interests. They are trying to serve the public interest in all honesty and prudence. As the Oregonian said the other day in pointing out the fraud of the "Stop, Thief" attacks: "These attempts to make blackguards and looters of the public domain out of respected officials insults the intelligence and competence of the people who voted them in before."

Differences in judgment on how resources should be managed should not be exaggerated into imputing evil design in the making of decisions.

"Democrats as well as Republicans feel they are thrice-armed when they can get Chas. A. Sprague as an adherent of the cause they are promoting."

The Oregonian

"On the power question CORDON deserves a major share of credit for the federal development that has come in the area during the ten years of his service in Congress."

CORDON FOR U. S. SENATOR COMMITTEE, W. H. STEIWER, CHAIRMAN, IMPERIAL HOTEL, PORTLAND, ORE.

the OREGON JOURNAL says,

"DON'T REPEAL, MILK ACT!"

Oregon Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER
Oregon Journal THURSDAY, OCT. 14, 1954
Corrupted freemen are the worst of slaves.—Garrick

Amend, Don't Repeal, Milk Act

The Journal opposes the outright repeal of the milk marketing act, commonly called the milk control law, as proposed by an initiative on the November 2 ballot.

This may seem strange to those who remember that The Journal actively supported the 1952 proposal to amend this act to the extent of removing state controls above the producer level.

It should be clear, however, that amending the milk control law so as to continue protection of the milk producer but remove controls at the distribution and retail levels is one thing. Throwing the entire act out the window, leaving producers at the mercy of distributors and retailers, is something else.

We are convinced that the latter move would not be in the public interest. It would invite exploitation of the producing dairyman by an unscrupulous few. It might endanger our milk supply. And that would be tragic.

The repeal move, furthermore, is not solidly conceived. Nor is it backed by substantial interests. It grew, instead, out of the feud between Elmer Deetz, Canby dairyman, and the milk control board over Deetz' gallon jug campaign.

There is no substantial group of consumers or dairymen back of Deetz. And Safeway stores which took an active and open part in the 1952 campaign to amend the law to permit a store differential are not supporting the repeal move. They are against it, believing as The Journal believes, that it would damage the producing dairymen and foment a chaotic milk marketing situation.

The Journal still maintains that some reasonable amendment of the milk marketing act is in order. It is too drastic. It reaches too far into distributing and retailing channels.

The Journal still believes that the dairymen themselves should go to the legislature with their own amendment proposals, proposals which would protect the producing dairymen but which would give a better break to consumers, large numbers of whom feel that they are entitled to a store differential.

This is a proper time, too, to suggest that, if the dairymen would generate such a program, they would not be forced year after election year to campaign and spend large sums protecting a vulnerable milk control act. They could thus devote their time and money to constructive purposes, particularly to doing a better merchandising job.

We know a number of thoughtful diarymen agree with this point of view.

Meanwhile, we repeat our opposition to the repeal measure. It involves too great a gamble with the basic dairy industry and with Oregon's milk supply.
