A NEW COMPETITOR TO ELECTRICITY.

The new illuminating gas, acetylene, is the latest competitor that chemistry has produced that bids fair to successfully compete with electricity in the illuminating business. This new product of the electric furnace promises not only to furnish the best of all mediums for enriching common gas, but a gas which is itself the best illuminating gas known to chemists, namely acetylene. This gas has been known for years, but the difficulty of its manufacture prevented its general use. It is the lowest gas in the series of hydrocarbons, and has usually been generated in minute quantities and merely for experimental purposes in laboratories and lecture rooms by passing a stream of hydrogen through a globe in which an electric current was introduced. T. L. Wilson, an American, has accidentally discovered a means by which the gas can be produced in sufficient quantities and at small enough cost for practical purposes. Mr. Wilson was experimenting in the reduction of lime to its metallic element, calcium, in the electric furnace. He fused a powdered mixture of chalk and charcoal in a heavy metallic-like mass. After the mass cooled no calcium metal was found in it. By chance a lump was thrown into a bucket containing some water. A gas was immediately evolved in large quantities, and its odor was so powerful that it compelled attention. The gas burned when light was applied to it, and further tests proved it to be pure acetylene. Professor Vivian Lewis has demonstrated the great value of acetylene as a cool light. Its flame, although of a brilliant white, giving 240 candlepower per five cubic feet, is much cooler than a gas flame giving only 16 candlepower. The highest temperature in any part of an acetylene flame is a trifle under the 1000 degree, while in an ordinary burner with common gas the temperature is 1300 degree. A remarkable quality of acetylene is that it can be liquified by pressure and put in cans that can be tapped when the gas is needed.

A WORD TO THE CITY COUNCIL.

Our city has increased to such a size that it has become an absolute necessity for the convenience of its residents, that the names of the streets and avenues be known and used. The day has long gone by when by enquiring at the post office a stranger could receive explicit directions for finding a certain place. If the city council will pass an ordinance requiring the name of each street to be placed in a conspicuous place, they will be given the eternal blessing of this generation, and probably posterity will place them on a pedestal by the side of the renowned Dr. McLaughlin.

ANOTHER WOOLEN MILL.

Oregon is soon to have another woolen mill in operation, making eight now in the state. The Thomas Kay Woolen Mill company, owners of the Salem Woolen mills, have put in a mill at Waterloo, a small town on the south fork of the Santiam river in Lewis county. The mill is supplied with all the latest machinery and is a three-set in size, being one-third larger than the company's mill in Salem, and will employ to start with about 80 hands. The output of the mill will be wholly flannels and blankets, while the finer cloths, such as cassimeres, etc., will be made at the Salem mill. Waterloo has a splendid water power from the falls of the Santiam river, which will be utilized in furnishing power for the mills. The freighting to and from the mills between Waterloo and Lebanon, the end of the Southern Pacific branch will be done with teams. The manager says he is not working for any railroad extension to Waterloo now, but he thinks that when the business is established and the need of a railroad there is apparent, either an extension of the Lebanon branch of the Southern Pacific or a motor line from Albany will be built to Waterloo. The Salem woolen mills have been crowded for the past year with orders and the enlarging of their capacity by building this additional mill is an evidence of their merited prosperity. The success of the Salem woolen mills is proof that honest made goods will sell even in dull times.

ANNUAL MEETING.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Willamette Savings & Loan Association was held Wednesday evening and the following directors and auditors were elected: Directors, E. G. Caulfield, George A. Harding, W. A. Huntley, George Broughton, J. P. Logan, L. L. Porter, E. E. Charman, W. P. Hawley and C. P. Thore; auditors, N. O. Walden, Sidney Smyth and E. E. Williams. After other business was transacted, the stockholders meeting adjourned and the newly elected board of directors were sworn in and organized by electing the following officers: President, E. G. Caulfield; vice president, W. A. Huntley; secretary, H. H. K. Jones; treasurer, Bank of Oregon City; attorney, L. L. Porter. Finance committee appointed: E. E. Charman, G. A. Harding and C. P. Thore. Appraising committee: W. P. Hawley, Geo. Broughton and J. P. Logan. The various reports show that the association is in a prosperous condition and everything indicates a rapid growth in the near future.

THE PHILMATHESANS.—The Philomathean Society held a special meeting last Friday night for the purpose of reorganization. New officers were elected and an amendment was made to the constitution admitting as members to the society any person having proper recommendation, the membership heretofore having been limited to pupils of the high school. Eva Meldrum was elected president, Hulda Holden secretary and Clare Campbell treasurer. Pearl Meldrum, John Lewthwaite and Malcolm McCown were appointed an executive committee to prepare the program for each meeting. A renewed interest is being taken in the meetings of the society, and the attendance has begun to increase of late.

TAXES COMING IN.—It is a surprise to the county officials the way taxes are being paid in, for so far the amount is far in excess of what was collected during the same length of time last year. In the ten days ending Tuesday evening, Sheriff Maddock has taken in $7,402.06 and the money continues to come in about as fast as at first. The prompt payment of taxes cannot but indicate that times are not so hard in Clackamas county as they were one year ago, and that the return tide has set in and in another year we may look for something of our old-time prosperity.

HIS TRIAL SET.—Rev. J. C. Read's trial for attempting to hold up the East Portland bank will take place in Portland on Tuesday of next week. The plea of insanity will be brought forward in his defense, though Mr. Read says he is perfectly sane, by Judge John F. Caples, assisted by ex-Senator J. N. Dolph, who kindly volunteered to aid Mrs. Read in getting her husband out of his scrape. District Attorney Hume of Portland, will conduct the prosecution and as he is capable of making a vigorous fight, the legal battle will be a hot one.

FREIGHT CARS IN PORTLAND.—The East Side Railway Company is trying to get a franchise from the city council of Portland allowing them to run freight cars in that city. At the last meeting, the council refused to grant the franchise as asked for by the company, on the ground that the company demanded too many privileges. Another hearing will be given the company when Pres. Steele and Jo. Simon will try and induce the council to grant their franchise.

LEARN SHORTHAND AT HOME.—Miss Emma L. Dickenson, a graduate of the Portland Business college, will organize a class in shorthand at Mr. Dye's office on Monday, Apr. 1, at 7:30 p. m. Law and high school students, working people and teachers can join this class and by taking three lessons a week, soon master this valuable art. Miss Dickenson is an expert stenographer and a first-class teacher. Terms to suit the times.

CHURCH INCORPORATED.—Articles have been filed with the secretary of state incorporating the First Congregational church of Clackamas. The incorporators are: J. W. Roots, Jas. A. Wells, W. E. Holcomb, P. T. Rykman and N. S. Runyan.

The ENTERPRISE is the only newspaper in Oregon that gives a cash premium to those paying their subscription in advance.

AN INDUSTRY TO ENCOURAGE.—Clackamas county is rapidly becoming the great manufacturing center of this state and each year sees numerous industries added to the already large list. A tannery is now one of our industries that is bidding for the trade of our state. It is located at Needy and at present is conducted by R. W. Zimmerman. This tannery has been run in a small way for several years by David Zimmerman, father of the present owner, and the quality of leather turned out has been such that ready sale was always had for all that could be produced. Mr. Zimmerman now handles an average of 120 hides per month and his facilities are such that with a renewal of business in this state he can more than double his output. When the exporting of hides to the East and the importing of leather and leather goods is stopped, a big leak in the amount of money sent out of this state each year will be stopped and it will be an important factor in bringing a solid prosperity to the people of Oregon.

A MAN KILLED.—Friday night, as James Tucker and E. H. Osborne, two men living near Silverton, were beating their way on a freight train, one of them met with a fatal accident. The train stopped at Barlow, their car being directly over the Molalla bridge. Afraid of being detected by the trainmen, they jumped off the car, not knowing they were on the bridge, and fell to the ground below. Osborne was uninjured, but Tucker fell head-foremost on the rocks, and was killed. He was a man 52 years of age, and leaves a wife and five children.

The physician who prescribes for you understands perfectly well that he cannot be too careful. The more thoroughly he understands the art of healing, the more thoroughly he appreciates the necessity for caution. It is almost superfluous to say that the druggist to whom you take your prescription, should exercise at least a corresponding degree of care. If he fails to do this, medical attendance may be rendered valueless. You can have as much confidence in the prescriptions we fill for you as you could if you were competent to fill them yourself and did it.
