Future Deals With Reds Viewed By UPI Scribes

Editor's Note: Twenty five years ago Sunday, November 16, 1933, United States established diplomatic relations with Communist Russia. More than one-half of that time has been a period of cold war between the U.S. and her allies on the one hand and the Soviets on the other.

Two United Press International correspondents—Joseph W. Grigg, chief European correspondent, and K. C. Thaler, chief diplomatic correspondent in London—have covered all important East-West developments during those turbulent cold war years. They are at present covering the two Western - Soviet conferences in Geneva.

In the following joint dispatch they review the prospects for relations between Russia and the West in the coming critical months and years.

GENEVA (UPI) — The United States and her Western allies face a long period of Soviet "brinkmanship."

Russia's leaders today appear tougher, more confident, readier to take risks, less willing to compromise with the West.

They will be as hard if not harder to do business with in the future than they were in the past.

But they are not likely to provoke a nuclear world war unless the West threatens one of their vital interests.

That is the rather grim outlook for the near future in Soviet - Western relations as seen by Western diplomats with long experience of dealing with the Soviets—the men who are having to deal with them again at two Geneva conference tables right now.

These diplomats believe the Kremlin's foreign policy is going through one of its periodical major shifts. It is perhaps the most significant change of wind since Nikita Khrushchev threw "Stalinism" overboard and gave the world the gleaming — but, as it turned out, only temporary—hope of a thaw in the East-West cold war.

Today the pendulum appears to have swung right back again. The world is witnessing a return to "Stalinism," at least in Russia's foreign policy.

The swing-back is marked by a new Soviet cold war offensive.

It hit the West first in the Middle East last summer, then in the Far East in September and now has struck again in Europe—the most critical and most potentially explosive point in East-West relations.

So far it has been marked by:

—Russia's threat against the West in Berlin.

—Stepped up Soviet propaganda attacks against the West, particularly against the United States, all along the cold war battlefronts.

—Russia's successful move to swing once-recalcitrant Poland right back into the Communist line by renewed support for the Oder-Neisse frontier during this week's Moscow visit of Polish Premier Wladyslaw Gomulka.

—Revived Russian demands for a new East-West summit meeting.

—The tough, unbending Soviet line in both Geneva conferences.

What is behind this new Soviet cold war drive?

Seasoned western diplomats believe that as far as Europe is concerned it is a full dress campaign to consolidate the whole Communist position to solidify the "cold war frontier" in Europe for years to come.

Experienced diplomats believe the Middle-Eastern and Far Eastern drives probably were diversionary moves designed to shake up the West before the main offensive in Europe.

Khrushchev, they believe, has concluded that German reunification on Russia's terms is out as far as the immediate future is concerned.

Hence, in order to solidify Russia's Eastern European position, he has launched another major attempt to win international recognition and respect for his East German Communist satellite.

One step towards this was his proposal to pull Soviet troops out of East Germany. But free West Berlin, the biggest remaining window and "escape hatch" toward the West behind the Iron Curtain, must be eliminated before this can be achieved.

For this reason many Western diplomats believe Russia will step up the West Berlin squeeze to the very limit short of war. They see signs that, despite repeated Western pledges, Khrushchev still may not be fully convinced that the West would in fact go to war to save West Berlin.

The two Geneva conferences on suspension of nuclear testing and prevention of surprise attacks appear to be just minor fronts in Russa's present cold war drive. But they are important because they are the first major East - West diplomatic get - togethers since Russia's swing back to "Stalinism."

The renewed pressure on Berlin, the repeated, polite but relentless Russian "nyet" at the Geneva conference table, Moscow's moves to isolate and insulate "heretic" Titoist Yugoslavia politically and economically from the rest of the Communist world, Poland's restoration to the fold—all add up to the inescapable conclusions that:

—"Stalinism" is back to stay.

—Russia is in a tougher, more determined mood than ever.

—Russia will be harder to deal with than ever in the past.

—Although Khrushchev probably would not deliberately provoke a war, he is ready to push the West to the very brink.

Murder Case Is Continuing

THE DALLES (AP) — Douglas Jake said after his arrest that he might have killed his wife, a policeman testified Tuesday.

But Jake said that if he did kill his wife, Ethel, it was an accident, testified Woodrow Smith chief of the police force on the Warm Springs Indian Reservation.

Jake, 55, is a reservation rancher, and it was near the reservation that the body of his wife was found trussed in blankets.

Smith said he arrived at the scene shortly after Jake's arrest and saw the rancher in a police car.

Smith testified that Jake shouted: "Woody—I'd like to have you help me out. If I did this it was an accident."

The prosecution said that Jake, on trial for second degree murder, beat his wife to death after a long drinking spree.

Jake has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Why "Good-Time Charlie" Suffers Uneasy Bladder

Unwise eating or drinking may be a source of mild, but annoying bladder irritations—making you feel restless, tense, and uncomfortable. And if restless nights, with nagging backache, headache or muscular aches and pains due to over-exertion, strain or emotional upset, are adding to your misery—don't wait—try Doan's Pills.

Doan's Pills act 3 ways for speedy relief. 1—They have a soothing effect on bladder irritations. 2—A fast pain-relieving action on nagging backache, headaches, muscular aches and pains. 3—A wonderfully mild diuretic action thru the kidneys, tending to increase the output of the 15 miles of kidney tubes. So, get the same happy relief millions have enjoyed for over 60 years. New, large, economy size saves money. Get Doan's Pills today!

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Hold false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug counter.

Courtly Air Hits Coast

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The normally casual West Coast is breaking out in a rash of protocol, court etiquette and regal ball gowns.

California debutantes who know what to do on a golf course or a beach are learning how to curtsy —with some growing pains.

The Los Angeles haute couture is being flooded with orders for formal ball gowns, and the book stores are selling out Emily Post.

It's all because of the impending visit of Queen Frederika and Princess Sophie of Greece, and the Imperial Ball to be held in Beverly Hills Nov. 22.

Out here in the free-and-easy West, the girls are taking their curtsy lessons seriously, and there is a rush of business at the salon of Emmaline Snively, an expert on such matters, whose business normally is training fashion models.

Miss Snively knows a trend when she sees one, and she says this year's trend is definitely regal. She discovered Marilyn Monroe and Jayne Mansfield even before American men did, and gave them their first modeling jobs.

"A proper curtsy looks as easy as a whirl by a professional model," says she, "but it takes just about as much mirror drill."

Women aren't the only ones having their troubles in preparation for the Imperial Ball. California men, who prefer to dress in sports coats and slacks, are ordering white ties and tails, and are being schooled by determined wives in how to wear them.

They also are practicing the court bow, while criticizing their womenfolks' efforts at the curtsy. The regal curtsy it must be pointed out, requires that the right knee must touch the floor.

There hasn't been such a ruckus in these parts, they tell me, since the Prince of Wales made his historic visit to the West Coast after World War I.

NOISY SAFECRACKERS

SPURGEON, Ind. (UPI)—Safecrackers set off a charge of nitroglycerin to break into the vault of the First National Bank. It worked. But the explosion drew such a crowd they had to run away without the money.

BENJAMIN C. MANCEAU, aviation cadet whose home is in Tulelake, has been assigned to Harlingen Air Force Base, Texas, for training as an Air Force navigator. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Former Child Prodigy Was Under Dad's Thumb

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—You may remember Ruth Slenczynska from the headlines of another era.

She was the fat little girl who at eight made a spectacular American debut as a pianist, who was hailed by some critics as "another Mozart," and who went on to earn as much as $3,500 for a single appearance and more than a million dollars in her brief career.

She was the child whose father, a frustrated musician, claimed he "willed her to be a genius," and who, she claimed, ran her life with a tyrannical sternness and pocketed all the proceeds from her sell-out American and European tours. She was the girl who knew 200 musical compositions from memory, studied with Sergei Rachmaninoff and Artur Schnabel, and once filled in when a Paderewski appearance was cancelled.

That was Ruth Slenczynska, child prodigy, whose career ended with the start of World War II, in 1940, when she was 14.

Today, she is an attractive, dark-haired woman of 33. She's just under five feet in height, weighs 103 pounds—"five pounds less then when I last played at Town Hall," she laughed. "At eight, I weighed 108; at 14, I wore a size 16 dress; now I buy fives and sevens."

"I was fat because my father believed that fat was healthy."

"Now," she said, "I'm a firm believer in cottage cheese." She added that it was not so much diet but "abject poverty" which slimmed her down. "I had a choice of teaching music and eating," she said, "or practicing and not eating."

What of the years in between?

The pianist said that in 1940, she returned to her native Sacramento, Calif., determined to live a life without her father's dominance. She was accepted as a freshman at the University of California, but her father refused to pay her tuition.

She worked her way through school, as a psychology major, with jobs as junior librarian, gymnasium assistant, and pianist for a post-graduate music course.

In 1944, she eloped to Reno with a fellow student, and apparently this was the final break with her father. She said he ordered her out of the house and apparently never forgave her — when he died seven years later, his will left nothing to her.

She returned to work when her husband went into the Army—teaching piano at Mercy College of Music, Carmel, Calif. The marriage ended in 1951, and it was then she resumed her piano studies.

The pianist said there no longer is any bitterness toward her father — "I figure he would be proud of me," she said, "but if he were alive I would not have the courage to do what I'm doing."

Other parents can learn a lesson from her case history, she said. "If a child is gifted, in any direction — music or mathematics — don't push him. Just encourage him. And give a child music for the love of it... don't get off the road as my father did."

She's convinced that prodigies are born, not produced. "You can't make a thistle bear peaches," she laughed. "But peaches cultivated will produce better."

Travel In Shirtsleeves Predicted By Scientists

NEW YORK (AP)—Space pilots may whip off to Mars or the moon in their shirtsleeves, scientists said today.

The big luxuries of the trip may be only a shave and a change of underclothes from time to time.

This was the rugged future of man in space suggested by a panel of space doctors and engineers at the 13th annual meeting of the American Rocket Society.

Whatever the space pilot is allowed to wear, his worst moments may come at the beginning and end of his trip.

It is then he must withstand the enormous stresses of blast off acceleration and the braking of reentry into the earth's atmosphere.

He is scarcely likely to enjoy either ordeal, said Col. John P. Stapp, U.S. Air Force researcher who has tested these stresses on the human body in rocket sled work.

A new space capsule, being built at the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, was described by Capt. Willard R. Hawkins and Dr. George T. Hauty.

It will serve as a training capsule for future space fliers and as a research chamber, they said. It will incorporate many items learned in earlier space flight experiments.

Food may be one of the biggest morale items of the space flier.

In simulated space trips, volunteers said baby food and other unattractive items did their jobs poorly. They were demoralized. Some even became nauseated.

In fact, a high caloric diet with exotic foods, plenty of fruit juices and water, was the biggest morale factor in the first seven-day pretended space flight, the scientists said.

Some of the experimental items served to the space fliers were lobster, Norwegian shrimp, quail eggs and boned turkey.

Drinking water should be cool and fresh-tasting — another big morale item to men who lived for a week on stale brackish water.

Time is one of the biggest tests in space—and boredom is another.

The jobs of the space flight pretender, once mastered, become monotonous. Time hangs around the space flier. He develops fears and depressions and he gets more irritable as his flight wears on.

Recorded music, a boon at first, soon becomes irritating as the space flier hears his favorite songs repeated over and over again.

Little things — the instruments on the panel, the recording camera that takes the space flier's picture every three minutes—all become extremely annoying.

The space flier is deprived of his usual seven or eight hours of uninterrupted sleep. He may stand four-hour watches with periods of three or four hours, or less, to rest or sleep.

When asked to work a couple of hours longer, some of the volunteers became angry and abusive, the scientists said.

The new space flight simulator, designed to accommodate two men for periods up to 30 days, will have more room, more things to do, and will be closer to being a space home away from home.

Since World War II the British Navy has been withdrawing from Bermuda and now maintains only a small station there.
