How To Lick 'Objective' Exams

By LESLIE J. NASON, Ed. D., with HARRY KARNS

Let's continue our chat about how to prepare for tests so that they become pleasant rather than harrowing experiences.

We talked about essay exams, the kind in which you are asked to remember and write out the answers to questions. Many of the same methods of preparation apply to what is known as the "objective" exam.

This is the kind that merely requires you to recognize and mark the answer.

You should prepare for objective exams by a general review, as you do with the essay type. But remember this difference:

The objective test usually requires review with a greater emphasis on specific statements.

Start by skimming through your material. Keep asking yourself: "What sort of question is the teacher likely to ask about this point, this character, this date?"

You practice baseball by throwing and hitting balls. Prepare for exams by tossing yourself questions and hitting them back.

If the exam is one covering an entire book, it is good practice to scan the index. Each item can be used as a cue to remind you of specific facts. When you hit an item that doesn't ring a bell, you have touched a short in your knowledge. Repair it so the bell rings the next time.

Some students pile up facts in their heads the way junk yards pile up old car bodies. In the junk yard, where everything is stamped together in gigantic bales and shipped off to market, this habit is all right. In education, it leads to chaos.

The best way is to fit each piece of information into its logical place in the general pattern of your knowledge of the subject. Relate it in some way to other facts and ideas. If you do this, you are prepared for tests of either ability to recognize or ability to remember correct answers.

Tests on Math

In certain ways the preparation for tests in math varies from the procedure we've been talking about.

You are confronted in the math test with a mixed series of problems or exercises. They are not necessarily arranged in the same order in which they were presented in the textbook.

You must keep in mind the processes to be used, but you also must understand the principles involved.

You must be able to select the proper set of principles to be used in the solution of a given problem.

Your review for such a test could involve the following steps:

Step One. Go through the materials to be covered and find the principles that apply. Each time you come to a principle, ask yourself: "To what type of problem can this be applied." And: "How would I recognize the possibility of using this principle to solve a problem?

Step Two. Go through all the exercises and pick out problems with which to practice. As you attack each problem, ask yourself: "What kind of problem is this?" "What principles could be applied in working it?" "How would I recognize this?" "Exactly what is considered to be the solution?"

If your first excursion through the sets of exercises proves rough, if you have to refer too often to the author's solved examples, run through Step One and Step Two again.

We didn't promise to do away entirely with the labor of learning. We promised to organize it and make it easier and show you how to improve. And after all, which is simpler—going through Steps One and Two a half dozen times, or going through the same math class twice?

We have stressed in these chats time and again how important it is in learning to be exact.

Certainly no field requires precision more than science does. So many of the ideas in science are expressed in numbers and must be understood exactly.

In chemistry you must know, without the slightest doubt, the meaning of molecular weight and how to balance an equation.

In physics the laws must be understood in terms of numerical relationship. The same holds true in many areas of the other sciences.

Tests on Science

When you prepare for science tests, try the following:

1. Search through your book and your notes for concepts, laws, relationships which need to be understood in terms of numbers. Think about these ideas until you are able to use them in working problems without hesitation, without guesswork.

2. Memorize significant laws and principles.

3. Make up a list of questions to ask yourself. Form these questions on the basis of questions asked on previous exams. Get them from exercises at the ends of chapters. Shape them from hints given in lectures.

4. Answer these questions, either writing them down or reciting them to yourself.

5. Look for terms the teacher may ask you to define. Study a term until you know exactly the sort of situation in which it could be used. Picture an object or a situation to which the term is related in some important way.

6. Form a pattern for remembering any long lists of names or terms. It is helpful to employ some memory scheme such as caricaturing or exaggerating. But the main thing is to have some system which works for you. The test of the system, naturally, is whether it actually does help you remember.

In this and previous chapters we have talked a lot about how to get ready to take examinations. But getting ready is only part of the chore. Do you know how to take an examination?

Tomorrow: How to take an exam.)

Man Killed In Slide

GRANTS PASS (AP)—An earth slide killed a workman at a tunnel project just south of the Oregon-California border Tuesday.

The coroner's office said the dead man was George Loghry, 46, of Redway, Calif., an employe of a firm doing excavation work for a tunnel at Oregon Mountain. The tunnel is part of a project to straighten the Redwood Highway.

Loghry apparently saw the slide coming and tried to run, but was caught by the earth and buried. Other workmen dug through the slide and recovered the body. He was an employe of the Grafe Callahan Construction Co. of Los Angeles.

Survivors include the wife and six children.

Eichmann Trial Date To Be Set

JERUSALEM (AP) — A new date for the opening of the Adolf Eichmann trial probably will be announced next week and it is assumed it will be about April 12, a high source said today.

Court officials reportedly agreed to lawyer Robert Servatius's request for more time to prepare the defense of the former Nazi as the mastermind of the killing of millions of Jews.

Study Shows Pay Deficit Not Hurting

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A study prepared for the House Foreign Affairs Committee says this country's international payments deficit is not severely hurting basic U.S. economic strength.

The report, prepared by the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress, said there was "a serious problem with respect to gold and confidence in the dollar that cannot be ignored."

But the report, released Tuesday, said there was "danger that solutions might be applied that go unnecessarily beyond the area of money and finance into the area of foreign policy.

"In particular, there is danger that the larger objectives of foreign policy will be sacrificed because of preoccupation with the relatively superficial problem of maintaining balance between international monetary payments and receipts."

Other congressional news:

OECD: Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development would be an "historic achievement of U.S. foreign policy." High tariff advocates who oppose the 20-nation trade pact also were called to testify at the second day of committee hearings.

BRACEROS: Rep. E.C. (Tuck) Gathings, D-Ark., anticipating increased opposition to extension of the Mexican farm labor program, called for hearings on the subject. He said four days of hearings tentatively were scheduled beginning March 9. Gathings' bill calls for a five-year extension, to Dec. 31, 1966, of the law authorizing importation of Mexican farm workers.

Crash Victims Have Relatives Living In State

PORTLAND (AP)—Two of the United States ice skaters killed in the crash of a jet liner in Belgium today were grandchildren of a Eugene woman and cousins of a Portland newswoman.

On board the plane were Ila Ray Hadley and Ray Ellis Hadley of Seattle, and their stepmother, Mrs. Ray Hadley. The Hadley children are cousins of Margaret Spang, a reporter for the Portland Reporter, and grandchildren of Mrs. Ila Dillenbeck of Eugene.

The two young Hadleys were Pacific Coast champions and national champions in senior pairs figure-skating competition. They had given an exhibition at the Lloyd Center Ice Rink in Portland when it opened last year.

Shepherd Dog Returns Home After Ordeal

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (AP)—Tosha, a German shepherd dog given up for dead a year ago after he plummeted into the Niagara gorge, has come home.

The dog, owned by Charles Tiller, fell into the gorge when he leaped at a bird. The family gave up hope, and after a period of mourning replaced him with Big Boy.

A few days ago a bedraggled dog arrived at the Tiller home, and a veterinarian recognized a scar on his leg. Now the trials of Tosha have been pieced together.

A mystery German shepherd was reported ranging the isolated gorge during the summer.

Tosha apparently lay unconscious after his fall, woke to find himself alone, and began his solitary existence.

He lived on small game until immigration men began to woo him back to civilization with hamburger. A case of dog food was given to Charles Blair, caretaker at the Maid of the Mist docks. Gradually he won the dog's confidence, and the rehabilitated Tosha then made his own way home.
