One of the more unusual forms of the duck play is the lead of a low trump in order to retain control of the suit until you have a chance to draw the defenders' trumps.

This play is exemplified in hand nine of the Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament.

The official bidding is shown in the box. North and South don't have to follow that bidding in order to get their bidding par, provided they arrive at the spade slam.

West is instructed to open the king of hearts and South should have no trouble finding the correct line of play. Naturally, he wins the first trick and then he should lead a low trump from his hand.

He won't make the hand unless trumps break 3-2 and he wants to lose his trump trick without giving up dummy's ability to ruff a second heart lead.

East wins the trick and is directed to force dummy by leading a second heart. South must get back to his hand and the correct way to do it is to cash one of dummy's high diamonds and ruff the next one.

The hand is set up so that South can make the hand if he ruffs a heart in dummy at trick two, cashes the ace and king of trumps and then plays out dummy's diamonds and clubs in the correct order. The fact that this play works does not make it correct but South gets two consolation points instead of the six he would get if he adopted the best line.
