China's Great River.

The Yangtze Kiang, or Yangtze river, is as long as the Mississippi and is far more important as a highway of commerce. From the great port of Shanghai as far inland as the important city of Hankow, a distance of 600 miles, the Yangtze is navigable for ocean going vessels. For the greater portion of this distance the river is very broad, and for some of the journey a passenger in a boat in midstream would be unable to see either shore distinctly. From Hankow to Ichang, 280 miles farther, the Yangtze is navigable for small river steamers, and from Ichang up to Pingshanhsien, nearly 1,000 miles, it is in great part navigable. Some of the passenger steamers plying between Shanghai and Hankow are exceedingly modern and comfortable. Thousands of sailing craft are seen on the river daily on a trip between these two points and numbers of huge rafts which require each a whole village to bring them and their contents to the distant market. The Yangtze has many important tributaries, one of these, the Hanko, which flows into the Yangtze at Hankow, is itself navigable for 600 miles.

The President's Title.

In spite of our traditions and our pretenses Americans dearly love a title. It's a fair guess that a larger part of the mail that goes to the White House is addressed to "His Excellency" or "His Eminence" or "The Honor." As a matter of fact his title is The President of the United States. That is title so great that the Fathers decided that to add to it would be to detract from it. The Fathers were wise. Taking their cue from the Federal practice the constitution makers not the statute makers of New York never gave the chief executive of this commonwealth other title than the governor of New York. Every governor of the state has been content with that. Address him as he better or by speech and you are right. Decorate him with an "excellency" or an "honor" and you are wrong. The governor of Massachusetts is His Excellency by warrant of the constitution of 1780, but he is the only excellency we have in America. New York Sun.

Buffoonery in "Hamlet."

The buffoonery once tolerated in professional theatres is illustrated in an episode set forth in the memoirs of Harry Montague. Wright, who was the first gravedigger, prepared himself to take the house by storm by having incased his person within a dozen or more waistcoats of all sorts of shapes and patterns. When about to commence the operation of digging the grave for the fair Ophelia Wright began to exhibit by taking off waistcoat after waistcoat, which caused uproarious laughter among the audience. But at last he he relieved himself of one waistcoat Paul Redford, the second gravedigger, incased himself in the cast-off coats, which increased the salvos of laughter, for as Wright was getting thinner Paul grew fatter and fatter. Wright, seeing himself out done, kept on the remainder of the waistcoats and went on with his part quite crestfallen.

His Best.

A small boy, who had been allowed to run much in the streets, had so improved his opportunities that before he was five years old it was commonly said by the neighbors that he swore like a little pirate. Parental discipline did not avail to break him of the habit. One day when he was to visit his grandmother in the next street he was impressed by his mother to behave himself properly, and especially not to indulge in bad language. He promised to try to remember. On his return at night the anxious mother asked if he had been a good boy. He replied emphatically that he had, clinching the statement by adding:

"I only called grauma an old devil twice all day." New York Post.

Languages.

The French, Spanish, Italian and Portuguese languages (known as the "romance" languages) are offshoots of the old Latin and are to a considerable extent founded upon it, while the German and English tongues grew up quite apart from the Latin. That is why the Scandinavian, Dutch, German and English languages (which, like the peoples themselves, are closely related) are so scant in Latin words and derivations.—New York American.

Hope.

"Yes, she rejected me, but she did it in a most encouraging way."

"How was that?"

"As I went away she pointed to the footprints that I had made on the carpet and said, 'The next time you come to propose to me I want you to wipe your shoes clean!'"—Der Guckkasten.

China's Tea and Rice.

China has three crops of tea—the spring crop in April, the second in May and the "even flower" crop about the 1st of July. The export season is throughout the year. Three crops of rice are harvested. Export of this product is prohibited.

A Loving Couple.

"How many lumps of sugar, George?" asked the wife.

"Oh, have your own sweet way, as usual, dear," replied the husband.—Yonkers Statesman.

Fountain of Youth.

She—Old Mrs. Butterbus seems to be a fountain of youth in spite of her years. Sheba—At any rate she's always gushing.—Chaparral.

Ask your friends for advice, women for pity, strangers for charity and your relatives for nothing.—Spanish Proverb.
