IF A BODY MEET A BODY

the result is a collision, whether "coming thro' the rye," or not. Life is full of collisions. We are constantly colliding with somebody or something. If it isn't with our neighbors it is with some dread disease that "knocks us off the track" and perhaps disables us for life. Women especially it seems have to bear the brunt of more collisions and collections than mankind. In all cases of nervousness, bearing down sensations, tenderness, periodical pains, sick headache, congestion, inflammation, or ulceration and all "female weaknesses," Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes to the rescue of women as no other medicine can. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle-wrapper.

It Means Blaine.

The rapid accessions to the ranks of the "Farmers' Alliance" and its constantly increasing strength as a political party in the middle states excites no little interest in the far west. Those who feel a keen personal interest in the success of the old line parties cannot but view with uneasiness the aggressive organization that is taking so prominant a part in the politics of the great agricultural states. That it will be a great political factor in the next presidential election is no longer doubted. It is even probable that it will hold the balance of power in the next congress. The question is, to which party will it lend its influence? The organization is most powerful in the states which always return great republican majorities. The nominees of the Alliance belong to both parties. On purely political questions which do not affect the purposes of this organization the representatives in congress, who may be elected, will undoubtedly follow the party with which they were originally identified. This means a loss to the republicans. With a bare working majority in the last house it looks as if the democratic party would dominate the next house.

It will be interesting to watch the preparation for the next presidential contest. Will the Alliance favor McKinley with his high protective tariff, or will it support Blaine's reciprocity doctrine? Even the most enthusiastic protectionist can hardly hope for the support of the agricultural element for McKinley, the champion of protection, and experience has taught us that the farmer will not desert his party and embrace the doctrine of free trade. Not favoring either extreme he would naturally support that element of his party that points out an apparently easy and satisfactory solution of the great question. Unless serious dissensions arise in the Farmers' Alliance before the next great political struggle, Blaine's chances of the nomination for presidency and of his election are brighter than ever before.—Astoria Columbian.

BOOKS FOR CHILDREN.

The following good advice is given by Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Principal of the Chicago Kindergarten Training School, on the subject of books for children. The sense is apparent: Is not the food you furnish your child's mind of as much importance as that you give his body?

When your child stops questioning you, he has not stopped questioning concerning life and its problems; he has turned to those silent companions which you have placed upon his book shelf or on the library table. Shall heroes and prophets be his counsellors, or shall Peck's "Bad Boy" and the villian of the dime novel teach him how to look at life? It rests with you.

There is a great difference between books which can be read to children and those which are to be read with children. The latter require the mother's sympathetic and genuine interest in the subject matter in hand; and frequent stops for little talks about what has been read are necessary.

Childhood is pre-eminently the period of perception. Hence all books on scientific subjects are helpful, if they are simple enough to aid the child in seeing nature and her marvels. The mother should see to it that the child does not rest in mere percepton of the objects of nature, but that he compares and classifies them, and, above all, that he is led to trace a purpose in created things, in order that he may learn to "look through nature up to nature's God."

A few good books are better than many less good ones. It is well to lead a child to the world's great poems as soon as possible. Enough but leaving him as if dead are not hurtful to [illegible] should be personally inspected.

After all it is not so important what your children reads as what you read. If the father reads nothing but the newspapers and the mother nothing but novels, what then? Children are taught as much by the general tone of conversation of their parents as by the books they are given to read.

NOTES ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

Among the most interesting articles in the North American Review for November is a contribution by Walt Whitman on "Old Poets." The old poets of whom Mr. Whitman writes include Longfellow, Bryant, Emerson and Whittier.

Mr. George P. A. Healy, the distinguished American portrait painter contributes to the November number of the North American Review a chapter of reminiscences, in which he gives some original anecdotes of General Jackson, Henry Clay, etc

Among the new books to be published by Harper & Brothers during the month of October are Colonel Knox's Boy Travellers in Great Britian and Ireland; McCaskey's Christmas in Song, Sketch, and Story; Daudet's Port Tarascon; the Last Adventures of the Illustrious Tartarin, and The Tsar and his People, by Theodore Child, Vassili Verestchagin, and others.

Mr. James Monro, ex-Commissioner of the London Police, describes the police system of the British metropolis in an able article in the November number of the North American Review, which gives a more complete and authentic account of Scotland Yard than has ever been published in America.

The fairy tales on which children are fed in their most impressionable days are largely responsible for the rage of all girls, particularly Americans, for princes. There was never a fairy-story written that did not have a prince for a hero. What would have been Cinderella's reward if the young man who found her glass slipper had not been a prince? Suppose he had been a worthy grocer's clerk, or an intelligent young farmer out on a lark; would not the tale have lost its fascination? Then the hind in the wood; did he not turn into a prince? and the frog also? Suppose the hind had turned into a wood-chopper, and the frog into an honest fisherman; would the girls have been so well pleased? And are not all the fortunate and happy girls of the fairy tales princesses either by birth or marriage? There is more truth in this theory than people imagine, and if you ever become the father of a family, don't let your children know about the titled heroes of fairy-tales.

The complete novel in the November number of Lippincott's Magazine is contributed by Mrs Jeanie Bettany, the clever author of "The House of Rimmon." The story is entitled "Laggard in Love," and the scene is laid in England, principally in what is known as the "Black Country." The homes and characters of the rustic people dwelling therein are described with a wonderfully graphic pen, for Mrs. Bettany possesses a touch and genius something akin to that of George Eliot, which enables her to weave a thrilling romance out of the lives of humble people. The birth and developement of an overmastering passion in the heart of a young country maiden, and the tragic force which it becomes, is pictured with the hands of a master. A great variety of characters, representing different phrases of English life, are introduced and all are capitally portrayed. Without obtruding itself the moral of the story is a strong and healthy one.

The November number of The North American Review opens with a review of the work of the first session of the Fifty-first congress. With its usual impartiality, it allows three representatives of each party in the house of representatives to express their opinions with entire freedom. The spoke men of the republicans are Mr. McKinley, of Ohio, the author of the McKinley tariff bill, to which all the writers devote considerable attention; Mr. Lodge, of Massachusetts, well known as the author of the Lodge Election bill, and Mr. Dalzell, of Pennsylvania. The democratic side is represented by Mr. Fitch, of New York, Mr. McAdoo, of New Jersey and Mr. Clements, of Georgia.

The first and best poultry-keeper's paper on the Pacific coast, The California Cackler, has recently been purchased by Chas. R. Harker, for years editor of the New York Poultry Bulletin, and well known everywhere to fanciers of thoroughbred fowls, dogs and pet stock. The Cackler will be greatly enlarged and improved, and hereafter will appear as the Pacific Coast Fancier's Monthly. It will be published at San Jose, Cal., and will be a finely illustrated magazine, equalled by few and surpassed by none. The new magazine can hardly fail to be of substantial benefit to all who raise poultry for pleasure or profit, and every body interested in blooded dogs, fowls, pigeons, cage-birds, etc., etc., will also be interested in the Fanciers' Monthly.

Harper's Bazar, in a judicious editorial on wedding gifts, has this to say concerning a custom which happily is no longer countenanced by the best society: "That one may have as many recurring wedding festivals as there are wedding days recurring, no one will deny. But that one may turn any of these festivals into an excuse for begging and receiving, an excuse for imposing another domestic tax upon friends and acquaintances, no one now will assert, whatever may have been polite usage a generation since. ..... Indeed, whenever one thinks of the great sacredness and tenderness of the marriage relation, it seems difficult to see how anyone can be willing to vulgarize and profane it by such a custom as the asking and receiving of gifts, and we would expect its anniversaries to be celebrated not in rude merrymaking, but with a sort of sweet solemnity making such things impossible."

The Problem Solved—An Unrivaled Blood Purifier.

Found at last in Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup....A remedy which expels all poison the matter from the blood. A well known citizen of West Lebanon, Ind., testifies to its value:

Gentlemen: It affords me pleasure to state that my wife has received greater benefit from Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup than from any medicine she has ever taken. We have used six bottles, and find it to be the best family remedy we have ever used. It is truly all it is claimed to be by its founder. Yours truly,

THE WEEKLY CAPITAL JOURNAL
$1.00 Per Year
IS THE LARGEST, CHEAPEST
And Best
For the Money on the Pacific Coast

It has a large circulation in the towns and among the best farmers of Marion, Polk and Yamhill counties. Aside from this it also has a wide circulation throughout the Eastern states among people who are studying Oregon with a view to coming West. THE JOURNAL makes a specialty of giving accurate information concerning fruit growing and farming products, also the market reports. It is an unexcelled advertising medium for the local trade and real estate interests.
