"German Syrup"

A Throat and Lung Specialty.

Those who have not used Boschee's German Syrup for some severe and chronic trouble of the Throat and Lungs can hardly appreciate what a truly wonderful medicine it is. The delicious sensations of healing, easing, clearing, strength-gathering and recovering are unknown joys. For German Syrup we do not ask easy cases. Sugar and water may smooth a throat or stop a tickling—for a while. This is as far as the ordinary cough medicine goes. Boschee's German Syrup is a discovery, a great Throat and Lung Specialty. Where for years there have been sensitiveness, pain, coughing, spitting, hemorrhage, voice failure, weakness, slipping down hill, where doctors and medicine and advice have been swallowed and followed to the gulf of despair, where there is the sickening conviction that all is over and the end is inevitable, there we place German Syrup. It cures. You are a live man yet if you take it. ●

A Compromise in High Art.

A North side bank clerk received a small painting from the brush of his fiancee, who dabbles in art a little for her own amusement. The gift showed an outdoor scene—a lawn, with a hammock swung between two branching trees; a girl lying in the hammock, and a pet cat clinging to the trunk of one of the trees, apparently about to leap down into the hammock beside her mistress.

The young man received the present with the most profuse thanks, but at length he remarked very earnestly: "It's a perfect little gem, my dear, and no mistake; but if you don't mind, I'd like to ask you a question about it."

"Delighted, I'm sure. What is it, Tom?"

"And you promise not to be angry with me for my foolishness in asking it?"

"Why, certainly. How could I?"

"Well, then, Mollie, would it be possible for you to metamorphose that cat into a squirrel?"

"What an idea! Don't you like cats?"

"Oh, yes, indeed. That is why I object to your taking such unwarranted liberties with that feline."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, you see you have made your cat come down that tree feet foremost. A cat can't do that. A cat always backs down. So you'll either have to reverse that cat or paint a bushy tail over her back and cut her head down a little and shorten her legs and make her over generally, so that she will pass muster as a squirrel."

The matter at issue was finally compromised by the conversion of cat (or squirrel) into a large knothole in the side of the tree, which left less room for hypercritical discussion.—Chicago Mail.

Advocating Bigger Guns.

At a meeting of the Royal United Service institution Fleet Engineer George Quick read a paper on "Heavy Guns." He said that in the Victoria, Sans Pareil and Benbow the British navy has three magnificently powerful vessels perfect in all respects except that their six heavy guns have proved weak. These are said to have cost $90,000 each, or a total of $540,000 for the guns of the three vessels. Mr. Quick contended that new guns of 16.25 inches caliber, of greater power and of much greater strength than the present guns, could be supplied to the Victoria, Sans Pareil and Benbow at a cost of $125,000 per gun, or $750,000 for the three ships, and if the guns were properly designed and constructed, by a proper adjustment of the size of the chamber to the diameter of the bore, and by the use of suitable cartridges, the life of the heaviest might be very much prolonged.

He advocated the use of a single motion breech mechanism, extremely simple in its operation, which, he alleged, was quite as simple as the turning of a grindstone handle. "Supposing," said Mr. Quick, "that six new guns be ordered for our three grand ships to replace the present ones. To insure a large reserve of strength, not only should an improved design be adopted, but also an increase of weight should be given, so that instead of weighing 111 tons they shall weigh 120 tons each. This would add a total of eighteen tons to each ship, which is a mere trifle in ships of 10,000 tons displacement."—Exchange.

The South's Prosperity.

Financially the southern states are glowing with health and promise and rejoicing in the consciousness of their essential greatness. No furor has been created by sensational advertising, but the world has been astonished by the latest statistics of wonderful growth, as shown in the national census of 1890. The sum of all is in the fact that the assessed value of property in nine states is estimated by the census officials to have grown from $3,000,000,000 in 1880 to $6,000,000,000 in 1890.

The reports of the census everywhere hell of enlarged and enlarging areas of cultivation, of new mines of coal and iron, excellent in quality and inexhaustible in quantity, of new manufactories in every department of human industry. All the bases of wealth and of sound and satisfactory finance are here; and in my opinion southern enterprises are animated, sustained and fortified by as sincere and high a regard for commercial credit and personal honor, and by as profound a conviction of the necessity of fair dealing as are to be found anywhere.—J. L. Williams in Forum.

The Brazilian Emperor in the Alps.

The proprietor has fought shy of royalty since the ex-emperor of Brazil came to Bernalit. His majesty and suite, numbering twenty-five in all, had also taken possession of the Mont Cervin, and for them the whole place was turned topsy turvy, and illuminations were given in their honor, and there were fine goings on, all of which were duly remembered when the time came to make out the bill. His majesty himself studied every item attentively, looking at the bill from beginning to end, and then handed it back to Seiler with twenty-five Cook's hotel coupons. And Seiler, who is no ordinary hotel keeper, thought the joke too good to keep to himself.—Century.

Culpable Negligence.

A widower accompanied the remains of his second wife to their last resting place. A terrible thunderstorm suddenly came on.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the widower, "again, like the last time, I have come without my umbrella. I'll take good care it shan't happen a third time!"—Il Mondo Umoristico.
