"The wife sent me down here to buy a car from you."
"Under the circumstances, I'd say you had a very sensible wife."
"Yes, I've stalled around now for two or three years trying to get out of it."
"You were certainly playing a losing hand, trying to beat evolution at its own game."
"It seems that conditions are so rapidly changing that it is practically impossible to find a cheaper form of transportation than the motor car."
"You say there are five in your family, and three of you go down town every day?"
"Yes."
"Well, if you had your own car you would save $14.40 in their car fare alone, and $6.00 on the other two, making a total of $20.40 per month. You would save from 30 to 40 minutes each per day, making a total of two hours time per day, or 60 hours per month. Your wise little wife is right, my friend, a good used car bought at a reasonable figure now, will earn good interest for you on your present expenditures.
