P. R. & N. WILL TAKE THE NEHALEM ROUTE

Company Goes to Coast by the Later Survey

INCREASES DISTANCE SIX MILES

Heavy Grades Avoided by Taking the River Route

The P R & N Co has at last decided to build from beyond Buxton to Tillamook Bay, by what is known as the lower, or Nehalem river survey. The upper route, which leaves the Nehalem river to the right, makes the distance from Hillsboro to the bay 87 miles. The new route increases the distance 6 miles, but avoids many grades and tunnels, and gives a far better scenic route to the Coast. The route selected follows the Nehalem where it is first intersected at the mouth of the Salmonberry, down the south bank of the Nehalem to the Coast. The surveyors are now busy re surveying the lower route, and this is the line upon which steel will be laid, next spring. It is the more feasible of the two routes.

The Nehalem river is a beautiful mountain river, and the region to be traversed by the road will contain much to please the eye of the traveller. The decision to take the lower route was arrived at within the past few days, and many people will be glad that this route has been selected. The Nehalem valley is fairly well settled, and the settlers will welcome the change of route, which will be greatly to their interests

ARRESTED AND RELEASED

Eugene D. Abbott, who lives up at the head of Scoggins' valley, was arraigned before Justice Barnes, Tuesday afternoon, charged with larceny from a dwelling The informant was I A. Hiltbrunner, who has a claim up in the same neighborhood. Hiltbrunner was absent from his claim for some time, in fact was an inmate of the County Home, east of town. When he returned to his place some time since, he discovered that his hou e had been entered, and a number of articles taken. A search warrant was gotten out at the old man's instance, and an officer from this place found a saddle and some quilts in the Abbott dwelling Hearing, through his son, that a search of his premises had been made, Abbott, who was working on the railroad, voluntarily came to Hillsboro, and gave himself up. He was accompanied by his wife, who was in delicate health, and his 14 year old son The Abbotts testified that the quilts was brought by them from Idaho, while the saddle, Abbott claimed, was found by the roadside. The only witness for the state was Hiltbrunner, who failed to identify some of the other articles, which he was at first positive belonged to him. Justice Barnes did not deem the evidence strong enough to hold Abbott, and he accordingly was released. Attorney Hoffman, of Forest Grove, who represented the accused, states that Abbott bears a good reputation The state was represented by Deputy District Atty. T. H. Tongue.

TIES STRUNG TO FOREST GROVE

Expect to Finish Road by the Middle of December

The Willamette Construction Company is pushing the work of the extension of the Oregon Electric line from Hillsboro to Forest Grove, at a lively rate. The contractors recently discharged a force of Greeks and replaced them with Bulgarians, who are said to be steadier, and not so much inclined to wrangle. The steel has been laid to a point beyond Cornelius, and the work is going on as rapidly as possible. The recent wet weather has somewhat interfered, but the work will be pushed regardless of weather conditions, until Forest Grove is connected with Portland. When the line is finished to the last named place, the train hands, who have been stopping here, will stop all night at the Grove. The new schedule which became effective last Sunday will be found in this issue of the Argus.
