LONG & McKINNEY

The groundhog day (tomorrow is his day) legend has no significance in old Oregon. The finest Springs we have enjoyed here have been when Mr. G. H. came out and saw his shadow.

It begins to look as though Hillsboro is going to get a gravity system of mountain water, one way or the other, and Hillsboro will be very much pleased to have it. By the way, that water commission seems to have started things going.

Wm. Muller, an old shipmate of John Vanderwal, and who came to this country with the rustling insurance agent, deserting a ship at Portland, is in the St. Vincent's Hospital, Portland, suffering from a stroke of paralysis. Muller was firing the furnace for the Sisters at St. Marys, Beaverton, a few days ago, and went to Beaverton after some tobacco. While returning home he suffered a stroke of paralysis, and was removed from the track, or he might have been run over by a train. He was taken in charge and sent to Dr. F. M. Robinson, who shipped him into the hospital. Vanderwal is doing all he can for his comfort, and he is getting better. Muller is a painter and decorator by trade, and has done a great deal of work around Centerville and Cornelius.

GRAVITY SYSTEM

Fred R. Waters, a representative of the Washington-Oregon Corporation, was in the city today, and said to the Argus:

"That the Washington-Oregon Corporation intends meeting the demand of the city by installing an efficient gravity system as soon as possible, is evidenced by the activity of a Portland firm of engineers who have been and now are at work on a project of gravity water from near Forest Grove, a distance of some eleven miles from this city. The Washington-Oregon Corporation instructed its engineers making this investigation to rush with all consistent haste the report on this water supply. It is expected that a full report of their findings will be available in about two weeks. We are satisfied that these engineers have found a supply sufficient for admirable gravity service to several towns besides Hillsboro. Of course, the actual report will prove the reliability of this statement, and coming, as it will, within the next two weeks, it will settle this particular question as to water supply.

The Washington-Oregon Corporation, when it first started business in this city, found the present plant inadequate to meet the local demands and thereafter built up the present system to more than double the original capacity. Finding that the present system was becoming outgrown by the rapid commercial advance of Hillsboro, they contemplated the installation of an adequate gravity system and their efforts have culminated in the work of the engineers whose report the company is expecting in the near future. In anticipation of possible delay, which, of course, is unexpected, the company is making several tests for a new well, which, added to the present supply now available, will give sufficient service to tide over the time required for the installation of the new gravity system.

That the Washington-Oregon Corporation has not been inactive or insensible to the needs and demands of Hillsboro, it might be stated that since coming into this city, the company has expended some $20,000 in betterments during its short time here. That the company greatly improved the service and increased the supply for domestic consumption is generally conceded. The rapid growth of the city naturally taxes the company to maintain an adequate supply. Yet gravity systems are of such financial magnitude that some care and time must be given to reasonable consideration of feasible projects. The proposed pipe line from the vicinity of Forest Grove, if installed, means an investment of nearly $100,000, and the natural consumption, along with the prospective, must come within a reasonable expectation of future business, to insure the expediency of installation. Water supply for domestic purposes always has been a live question, and always will be, Hillsboro being only one of many thousand growing cities throughout the country having this problem to solve. The Washington-Oregon Corporation is making every effort to meet the present demand for water and will doubtlessly, after considering the report of its engineers, prepare to expend the magnificent sum of nearly $100,000 getting a modern gravity system into Hillsboro.

COME ON, YOUNGSTERS; HERE IS YOUR CHANCE

Get Busy With Your Patch of Ground, at Once

SPLENDID CHANCE TO WIN LAURELS

Girls Also Have an Opportunity to be Famous

Before the first March winds blow the greatest series of try-outs ever held in the schools of Oregon will be under way. The boys and girls of the state are going to determine "Who is Who" in gardening, farming, carpentry, cooking, sewing, and in raising chickens, ducks and pigs. Enthusiasm for this state-wide series of industrial contests is waxing warmer than it has ever been for contests along athletic lines.

The plan is for every county superintendent to enlist the support of his teachers in explaining the plan to the children and interesting them in the work, and to secure the co-operation of commercial clubs, bankers, and business men in obtaining prizes for their local or county fairs. These county or local premium lists may be made out independently of the state list, but in order that children competing at a local or county fair may also be in line for state prizes the local or county list should include the articles on the state list, which are: Field corn, pop corn, sweet corn, watermelons, muskmelons, pumpkins, squashes, potatoes, cabbage, grain selections, bird houses, piece of furniture, mechanical toy, labor saving device for home, bread, canned fruit, jelly, mending, darning, aprons, dresses, asters, sweet peas, chickens, ducks and pigs.

A bulletin of information and instruction, including the state prize list, will soon be sent out to the school children, one for every home. All the boys and the girls now need to do is to go to work. If they want to compete in gardening they should at once secure a plot of ground, which they may have plowed. If boys expect to win prizes in woodwork they should begin practicing with their tools. If girls wish to carry off laurels in cooking and sewing they must begin early either at school or at home. If it is the poultry contest that lures most settings of eggs should be secured from breeders of pure strains of chickens or ducks. Or if hog raising seems most attractive, the competitor should secure a thoroughbred pig and start to feeding and caring for it. There is nothing to prevent a boy or girl from competing in all these lines.
