If the trusts were out of Mexico, the rebels would get but very little financial assistance. When Madero won over Diaz he was fought at all times by money from the big trust-stock holders in the United States. Diaz gave them what they wanted, and as a result they have been ready to finance the rebellion against Madero. But for their help there would doubtless now be no trouble in Mexico. Washington is wise not to meddle, and as a result Wall Street is having a case of jim-jams.

President Elect Wilson keeps his peace as to who shall fill his cabinet. This is rather strange. For many decades now we have most generally known who was to fill a cabinet as soon as a man was elected. This was very easy, for the big fellows were in absolute control. Wilson, however, realizes the big responsibility involved, and he is taking his time.

ANTOINE LEBARD

Antoine LeBard, who for many years resided at Kinton, below Scholls, died Feb. 17, at 1339 Atlantic St., from an attack of pneumona. He was a native of France, and was highly esteemed. Mr. LeBard was advanced in age and his temperate life gave him a great deal of comfort, never having been ill until he was stricken with pneumonia, about ten days prior to death.

For many years he has been a reader of the Argus—in fact he had been a subscriber to the paper ever since it was founded in 1894. A large circle of friends in and around Scholls deplore his death.

The Knights of [illegible] [illegible] to be built on their property, Second and Fir. John Engeldinger, the contractor and builder, has drawn plans for the structure, but its dimensions are not yet determined. The order is very strong in Washington County, considering its infancy, and when the boys get a home of their own they expect to add many to their membership.

Now is the time to think about getting pictures taken, and Johnson's studio in Hillsboro is the place to get them, if you want the best.
