Bandit, Policeman in Gun Battle Here

dit nor his car ever were seen again.

Friday Donald Jones and Jack Weisner were reported to have picked up a money bag stamped "Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco", at the intersection of the Beaverton, Cedar Mill and the Walker road, indicating that the bandit had passed that way.

Early Friday morning Portland police arrested John Shader and H. M. Dickson in Portland; Shader as he entered his hotel and Dickson after he reached his room. The two men were reported to have been together for a time during the evening.

Officer Johnson was of the opinion that Shader resembled the man who engaged him in the gun battle while Stutheit and George Follis of Hillsboro declared that they could not be sure of either man. The bandit stopped at the Follis station and asked questions about fishing in this county. Later he asked similar questions of Stutheit.

Saturday afternoon, San Francisco police shot and killed Stanley Abernathy, alias James O'Malley in a gun battle after the man arrived on the Shasta Limited from the north. In his possession, the California officers reported, was a gun similar to the one used in the shootig here; $1037 in $5, $10 and $20 bills. Currency taken from the bank included bundles of bills of similar denomination. The man is said to have fired on the officers when they attempted to question him.

Abernathy was identified by at least three Hillsboro persons as the man who fought the pistol duel with Officer Johnson and escaped unhurt to flee toward Portland. Pictures of the dead man, taken at the San Francisco police morgue, were shown to Mr. and Mrs. Stutheit, Follis, young Brown and Ritzman, Tuesday afternoon by Portland police. Brown and Follis declared that they could not be sure, but the others were positive, Sheriff Connell said.

Meanwhile the search for the black, 1936 Ford V-8 used by the bandit, continues with officers combing every side road and possible hiding place along the east hills in Washington county. The machine had one dented fender, one Washington license plate in front, and none behind.

Reports that Sheriff Connell was in possession of a bullet fired from the bandit gun, were denied by Connell, who did trace one of the bullets from the filling station to where it penetrated the rung of a ladder and a screen at the rear of the F. O. Eagon real estate office.

State Officer Johnson spotted the Ford coupe near the city limits of Hillsboro headed west. Suspicious that it was the machine used by the Sellwood bandit, Johnson, caught in heavy traffic, turned around as soon as he could and rushed toward Hillsboro.

Meanwhile, the bandit, seemingly suspicious of pursuit, stopped at the George Follis filling station on Tenth avenue and asked a question or two about a place to fish. He then drove on down the street and pulled into the gas station operated by M. J. Stutheit, where he inquired about a lake which he said was about 38 miles from Portland.

He was sitting behind the steering wheel of his stolen coupe when Officer Johnson turned leisurely into the driveway, stopped and emerged from his machine on the left hand side away from the bandit.

As Johnson stepped out from behind his car with his pistol in hand, he called to the bandit to throw up his hands. The first command went unheeded and he called again, according to witnesses. The bandit replied with a fusilade of shots, one of which knocked the heel from Johnson's riding boot and upset him.

Firing again, making four shots in all, the bandit threw his car into gear and dashed north along Tenth, where he was seen to turn toward Orenco along the Baseline road. Johnson, after telephoning from the office of F. O. Eagon across the street, to state police headquarters, sped away in pursuit. However, he gave up the chase about a mile and a half east of Hillsboro, returned and made a circuit from Hillsboro to Reedville and Orenco.

Meanwhile state police, deputy sheriffs from Multnomah county and Portland police blocked all roads leading over the hills or back into Portland. The Ford coupe never was seen again.

Most graphic account of the shooting came from Mrs. Stutheit, who was in a room adjoining the filling station and who saw the bandit open fire on Officer Johnson. Her husband had gone outside to speak with the driver.

"I was looking out the door," Mrs. Stutheit said, "as the man drove into the filling station between the door and the gas pumps."

"He asked Mr. Stutheit something about a lake and then Johnson drove up behind him. The man was looking into the rear view mirror or his car.

"I heard Johnson tell him to put up his hands and then I saw the man rest a gun across his arm and begin to shoot. It looked like a machine gun. I screamed and ran for the door leading from the living room into the filling station. I was afraid that my husband was going to get shot.

"He was right beside the car and was just paralyzed. I screamed at him to get inside, but it didn't do any good. He just stood there.

"Johnson shot once and then squatted down. The bullets were tearing around everywhere. Then the fellow hit Johnson on his heel and I saw him drop back onto the gravel. I thought he was killed.

"When Johnson fell the bandit put his car in reverse and backed up to here," Mrs. Stutheit indicated a place about 10 feet from the door where a car tire had dug a hole in the gravel in starting. It was a deep hole compared to other such abrasions on gravel roads.

"He took another shot at Johnson as Johnson lay on the ground and then started away," she said. "Johnson kept right on shooting," she concluded.

Harold Brown, youth, tells a less exciting story of what happened. He was in the door of the Johannsen filling station just beyond the junction of Tenth avenue and Baseline with John Johannsen and another man.

"I saw the fellow drive up to Stutheit's. He went in between the building and the pumps. A little later Johnson came along driving slow and turned in behind and got out of his car and came around front. Then the fellow behind the pumps began to shoot. There wasn't anybody real near and the crowd gathered after the shooting was over.

"The shooting didn't take long. It was all over right away and the fellow drove off. He came right past me and I had a good look at him. He sure was a hard looking guy with a big face, kind of dark," Brown related.

"When Johnson had telephoned, he came back to his car and started to follow the coupe. Me and another man got in our "bug" and followed," Brown said. "Johnson went down the road about a mile or two and turned around. When we got on the Baseline road there wasn't any dust and we couldn't see any car."

A question concerning the shot that took the heel off Johnson's boot brought the reply:

"It didn't throw him down, but it did throw his leg to one side and threw him off his balance. When he got up to walk away afterwards, he limped a little."

While Brown described the bandit as a "hard looking man," Mrs. Stutheit declared that he was light complexioned, fairly good looking and pleasant.

Although Sheriff John Connell and Deputy Dick Busch, warned by radio of the bank holdup, were at the sheriff's office, Officer Johnson failed to notify them, they said, and consequently it was not until a radio report was made from Portland that they were able to join in the search.

Young Brown and Erick Ritzman were taken to police headquarters in Portland Friday noon in an attempt to identify Dickson as the man who did the shooting, but were unable to say that he was the man they saw. Neither Shader or Dickson were identified by Sellwood bank officials and they were not held in connection with the robbery. However, minor charges were made by police.

Connell Herd Sire Considered Factor in Unusual Milk Production Increase

(By Wm. F. Cyrus, County Agent)

An increase in milk production of the entire herd by nearly eight per cent and its fat production by seven and a half per cent is the record of the Holstein bull, Glencliff M. B. B. Fobes, of the Connell herd seven miles north of Hillsboro. This is the herd now owned by Arthur Connell, which was formerly owned by the late Frank W. Connell and Arthur, operating as Connell Brothers. As the daughters of this bull have begun to produce, the production of the Connell herd has been raised from 314 to 395 pounds of fat per cow annually.

George N. Angell of the Oregon Farmer, in the next issue of that paper will have the following to say about this bull and his record. "The nine cows whose production was compared with that of their daughters by this bull, were all bred at the Twin Fir farm, but are by several different sires. They made from one to three records each in the dairy herd record association, averaging 11,992 pounds of milk and 387 of butterfat. Their daughters by Glencliff M. B. B. Fobes averaged 12,930 pounds of milk and 416 of butterfat, an average increase of 938 pounds of milk and 29 of butterfat. The largest record by any of the dams was 441 pounds, the largest by any of the daughters, 519 pounds. The latter represented also the largest gain by any daughter, the dam of the animal which averaged 519 pounds having produced only 337. Another daughter produced 467 pounds at first calving, as compared with 329, her dam's best record; and still another averaged 427 pounds for two records as compared with 340 for two by her dam."

"Use a proven sire if you can find one," said Dr. E. E. Heiser to Holstein breeders at the joint picnic at the J. A. Lindow and Sons' farm near Cedar Mill July 25. Dr. Heiser is a well known authority on animal breeding and is engaged by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America to spread the gospel of better sires, closer culling and more general testing. Glencliff M. B. B. Fobes was purchased as a calf in 1927 and is a son of Marathon Bess Burke, a bull brought out from Wisconsin by S. E. Chaffee of Sunnyside, Wash. The Connells are very happy and pleased about the constructive influence of this sire on their herd and they have reason to be for proven sires are rather scarce in Oregon."

The summarized record of this Washington county sire has just been received by the Connells and the feat of raising the average production of this herd is all the more remarkable when it is considered that the nine cows, whose daughters' records made the comparison possible, already had an average annual production of 387 pounds.

Mr. Angell says: "Raising a 250-pound average is 'duck soup' for a good sire but raising a 387-pound average even 7.5 per cent is a task for the best of them. In fact Dr. Heiser informed the Holstein picnic gathering that only 52 per cent of the Holstein bulls being used in America raise production at all; 48 per cent actually tear it down."

School Audit Funds More Cash Assets

disclosed that seven districts, which last year were on a cash basis, now have outstanding warrants while the Tigard union high school district voted a $22,000 bond issue.

With the exception of district number 68, all new debt contracted during the last year has been for capital outlay which now amounts to $53,223.53 as compared to $13,238.68 last year. Most of this increase, the report points out, was brought about by demands for work relief projects in this county, a great many of which have been furnished by school districts since 1933.

Summary of the report discloses that more tax has been collected, less loan warrants issued, and disbursements in all items increased during the last year.

Analysis of the totals, to segregate the union high schools, shows total receipts during the year for the high schools of $292,809.96 and disbursements of $285,3$62.88 with cash on hand amounting to $17,136.52 at the end of the fiscal year June 15.

The figures show that in the high school districts, the total debt amounted to $325,848.28 with additions made during the year of $82,773.86. Deductions for warrants and bonds paid during the fiscal year amounted to $115,208.15, making the total debts for these districts $293,413.99 on June 15.

To the totals for Washington county school districts should be added the figures given in the annual report for Hillsboro public school district, which is not included in the Amacher audit.

These figures include receipts of $37,798.44 for 1936 as compared to receipts of $37,058.28 for 1935. Disbursements for this year included $37,567.46, leaving a cash balance of $230.98 as compared to $44 for last year.

Last year $15,242.49 in outstanding warrants was paid as compared to $2300 this year. The district now is completely out of debt with no warrants outstanding, the report shows.

Assessed valuation of district number 7, Hillsboro, has taken a drop from $24,606,953.90 in 1935 to $24,534,926.92 this year.
