Better Times at Helvetia, Building Gains

(By Mrs. J. M. Davidson)

HELVETIA—After a number of lean years, 1936 has brought more prosperity to the average farmer in this community. In spite of the drouth, fall sowing is showing an average stand in most places. Better prices for potatoes will make up for the small crop. Several new buildings, painting and other improvements in the rural homes show that prosperity is on its way and if a fair price is paid for produce many plan to have improvements to the farm and homes.

Donald Guerber, who has been ill for some time, was able to start school Monday Lillie Yungen, who had her tonsils removed during Christmas vacation, is in school also.

Henry, Ernest and Clarence Tschabold went to Longview, Wash., Sunday to get their nephew, Harold McCuen, who has been with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. McCuen, during Christmas vacation.

Show Appreciated

The Argus editors can feel that they brought Christmas cheer to many when they invited subscribers to a free show at the theatre. The writer has heard many favorable comments, to some it was the only show they had seen during the year.

Mr. Grau and Mr. Faye, who have been living near Connell station, have moved to the Gill place in Groveland, where they will take care of the property while Mr. Gill goes to Eastern Oregon to engage in the sheep business.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Anderson of Portland were New Year's day dinner party guests at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Elmer Batchelder.

Council Confirms City Appointments

would eliminate duplication of effort in health matters.

When new councilmen had assumed the oath of office, each was called on for a short comment, Mrs. Wells being the first to speak following a short introduction by Stevenson. She declared that she desired to be known as Anna M. Wells, and expected to enjoy much pleasure in working with the city officials and with city problems.

She related that she had served with Stevenson on the school board and regretted that he was no longer a member of the council. Dr. Robb, also had served with her on the school board she said. "I hope," she remarked "to be of benefit to the council and hope that my viewpoint will be of some use."

Krocger spoke briefly, declaring that he expected to sit back and listen until he had learned how to proceed with his part of the work. Griffith said that he hoped to work for the best interest of the city and for the small home owners.

Retiring members of the council spoke, Anderson taking the floor first. He remarked that his association with the councilmen had been a pleasure and that he was glad he had the opportunity to serve. Person also remarked on the pleasure taken in the service. "The city now is in good hands and I wish the new council members well," he said. Stevenson took leave with a few remarks on the duties of citizenship, and closed by saying that he believed he had served enough to pay his debt.

The new council elected Dr. J. O Robb as president of that body for the next two years, to fill the vacancy left with the retirement of Stevenson.

Resolution to improve east Baseline street, from Tenth avenue east to the city limits, was passed by the new council. Petition for improvement was presented this week by property owners along that street. Work will be done as a WPA project.

Before taking his oath of office for his second term, Mayor Garrett gave a long report, praising the work of the various members of his council and the various city officials.

The sanitary committee, headed by Dr. Robb, Mayor Garrett said, had performed a fine work in procuring one of the best sewage disposal plants in the United States. Stevenson, head of the finance committee, was praised for his work as "watch dog of the treasury," which had enabled the city to emerge with excellent credit.

Of the city manager, Garrett declared that McGee, acting as engineer for the sewer work in addition to his regular duties, had carried the brunt of many troubles on his shoulders.

He also praised the city planning commission, of which Mrs. Wells was chairman; Fire Chief Melhuish for the efficiency of his department; Dillon for his work as fire marshal, and Chief Freeman for his untiring efforts.

Problems of the new year, Garrett declared, include the water situation. "The people have a right," he said, "to a more adequate water system. We have an abundant water supply and the problem is to make it available to the citizens, either through private or municipal owned system."

He suggested in closing, that every effort should be made to place all city owned property back on the tax rolls as rapidly as possible.

Helen McDaniel, retiring recorder, presented a bill for $300 covering back pay she alleged was due her through a 10 percent reduction voted by the council in 1932. The total is made up of sums of $20 per month from July 1, 1932, to December 31, 1934. The bill was set aside for further consideration.

Relief projects in the city, including the airport, city park, sidewalks and street projects, cost the city $10,167.79, all of which was borrowed from various funds. The council now desires to balance these funds and thus has authorized the issuance of the general obligation bonds.

In the discussion of the situation Wednesday night it was pointed out that there were two ways open for the council in financing the relief projects; one was a bond issue and the other a tax levy. The bond issue method was chosen.

Convalescing from Injury

A. H. McGee is convalescing from a broken rib sustained last week when he fell from a Pool-Gardner lumber truck. During two days of his idle time he carved from a match with a pocket knife a six-inch chain. It is now on display in the Argus window.

Routine Unbroken

While most other county officials were battling through an election, G. Russell Morgan was sliding through without opposition except in the primaries. So, as the old year died, he skidded right on into 1937 as district attorney, continuing without a break in his routine.
