Defeating Cate Motor company of Forest Grove 10 to 7 and 8 to 4 in a doubleheader Saturday night, Perfection Bakery won the right to represent Washington county in the state softball tournament Monday in Salem.

Cate opened the scoring in the first game with three runs, E Bailey hitting a homer with Hoar and B. Bailey on base. Perfection picked up one in the second, when Badertscher scored on an overthrow.

The locals took the lead in the fourth, Wahner connecting for a home run with Holscher and Klinger on board. Three more scores followed in the fifth on a walk, two hits, and an error.

Perfection scored again in the seventh, bringing home two runs, Holscher and Klinger scoring on three hits and a walk. Holscher turned in the final score for the Bakery in the eighth by swatting out a home run with none on.

In the final frame, Cate scored three runs on five walks and an error.

Scores in the first game follow:

	H	R	E

Perfection put the game on ice in the first of the seventh, scoring five runs after the first two batters were out. Wahner walked. Rucker singled and Wahner scored on Kirkpatrick's one-base hit. Wilcox then singled to score Rucker. Kirkpatrick and Wilcox scored on Doane's double. Holscher then hit a two-bagger to score Doane.

An error and a hit scored one run for Perfection in the third, while Cate brought in their final run on a hit and an overthrow. Perfection scored once more in the sixth, Munson crossing the plate on two hits. Scores follow:

	H	R	E
Perfection	11	8	1
Cate	7	4	1

Batteries: Kirkpatrick and Munson; Roberts and Hines.

Holscher Star

Holscher starred at bat, making a home run in each game, and hit four out of five times up in the first game.

Monday night, in a practice game, Perfection tournament team won from the Men's Shop, 17 to 1, while Frosted Food, city league, won from B. E. Maling, county league, 4 to 3.

Tonight (Thursday) a doubleheader is scheduled to begin at 7:30 with Woodburn Cannery meeting Frosted Foods of Hillsboro, and an all-star team, sponsored by Weil's, meeting the fast moving Perfection tournament aggregation.

Patterson's Fish Contest Winner

The contest was for trout only, and Patterson's catch was 26 inches. Second place, a leather-bound fishing basket, went to Dr. R. J. Nicol. His trout was 21½ inches long, while William Piatt, Forest Grove, was third with a fish 19½ inches long. The prize was a telescoping steel rod.

Continues Lead

Wes Schulmerich, manager of the Lewiston Indians, continues to lead the Western International baseball league and has boosted his average to .383. Harvey Storey of Tacoma, whose home is at Forest Grove, is second with .354.

Farmers to Plan Drainage District

(By W. F. Cyrus, County Agent)

The farmers along the Tualatin river from Gaston to Dilley, and along Wapato drainage ditch, together with those whose property borders the lower end of Scoggins creek, will meet at the K. P. hall in Gaston Friday evening to consider formation of a drainage improvement district.

This is one of the projects that has been under consideration for some time, but on which no action has been taken to date. Those interested in improving the river channel, and the drainage facilities of that area, are interested in setting up a drainage improvement district as provided for in the law enacted by the last legislature providing that property owners are interested in improved facilities for better drainage.

Rivals Play at Carlton

Cornelius and Carlton of the Tualatin Valley league will play at Carlton at 2:30 p. m. Sunday, winner to take all.

Next Sunday will see Verboort meeting Banks at Verboort for the right to meet Roy for the league trophy.

Wolf Creek Road Outstrips Wilson

Becomes Rugged

Once out of the Wolf creek valley, the country becomes more rugged, and considerable heavy construction remains before the final grade is ready for its surface, however the distance is not great in comparison with what lies ahead in the Wilson river valley.

At Quartz creek is found the largest bridge along the route, with the crew just getting work underway to complete it by Christmas. The bridge will be of steel and concrete, more than 800 feet long, and 135 feet high, spanning a steep canyon.

From the bridge, the road has been brought to grade in nearly all places to Elsie, and from Elsie the highway is surfaced to the junction.

Problem Greater

Wilson river, as viewed from Tillamook to Glenwood along its entire length, immediately discloses that the problem of construction is greater, while far more expensive than on the Wolf creek, and one becomes aware of the fact that the Wolf creek is 75 percent nearer completion than the Wilson route.

Thirty-one miles of the Wilson river road on the west slope, presents few difficulties to construction, but beyond that lies the box canyon of Devil's Lake fork, and the summit. A tiny shelf, not much wider than an automobile, has been gouged out of the cliff face through this canyon to carry traffic from completed sections of road on the west to the completed sections on the east.

From Tillamook Friday, the first automobiles on the sea routes loop trip, traveled 21 miles over completed highway to Jordan creek, where the forestry service guards a gate through which cars cannot pass during the fire season.

Five miles of the historic Wilson river stage road then is followed to reach the next point where grading is underway. Lack of a bridge at this point prevents machines continuing straight ahead along new grade.

However, a crossing is made farther down on the old stage bridge and then cars climbed to the new right-of-way to continue on portions of completed grade into McNamer's camp, 31 miles from Tillamook. Old state station in early days, this now is a work camp housing more than 300 WPA laborers.

Shovel at Work

Construction necessary between Jordan creek and McNamer's is approximately five miles to join all portions of the new grade. At McNamer's, shovels are biting their way slowly through a shoulder of the mountain to make a deep cut.

On the other side of this cut is the fork of the river, where the north and south forks meet. The new road follows the north fork and a bridge connects with some completed grade on the other side.

Then the automobiles entered the eight miles of pioneer road, which climbs from the camp to cling to the side of the rockbound canyon, from 200 to 300 feet above the river. The mountains rise at sharp angles away from the river, and from this solid rock the highway must be blasted.

Four-Mile Canyon

There is approximately four miles of this steep slope confronting the engineers, terminating in a tunnel which emerges on nearly a level valley of the Brown fork of the Wilson. A mile further on the road passes over the summit and follows the side of the mountain to the level of Gales creek on an easy grade.

Five miles of this grade is nearing completion, and heavy machinery now is tearing out several big cuts.

Speedometer readings show 64 miles from Tillamook to Hillsboro, and some of this distance will be cut off as the road is leveled and the twists and turns of the pioneer thoroughfare give way to completed right-of-way.

Unless the state highway department places a big slice of the remaining work under contract, many months remain before automobiles can pass from Hillsboro to Tillamook.
