News Then . . . Remember When?

Some years before the turn of the present century, this Hillsboro building was erected—and for those who haven't been Hillsboroans long, the building's identity will defy guesswork. It is now the city hall. Built in the early 90's with the city and the Masonic lodge as joint owners, it had the above general appearance until 1930, when it was remodeled by the city. The north half of the building, housing the Masonic hall upstairs and business space on the main floor, was the location of the old Hillsboro Independent for many years. Bert C. Shipley came into possession of the business location in about 1925 and operated a garage and new car gency there until the time the city gained possession of the entire building and remodeled. As pictured above, the Shilepy display room and garage occupied the north half of the downstairs, the city fire department was on the south side downstairs and the city recorder's office was upstairs where the firemen's recreation room is now. The fire bell, which hung in a real "belfry" then, is still atop the city hall roof, ready and waiting for emergency service should the fire siren ever fail. News then . . . remember when?

Portlander Speaks On Traffic Safety

Traffic safety and control were discussed at the Rotary club luncheon Thursday by Earl Campbell, who serves on the traffic safety commission in Portland. Charles L. Walker was program chairman.

Time lost to defense industries through traffic accidents, Campbell said, is twice as much as through industrial accidents. In 1940 this loss was equivalent to 1,750,000,000 man hours or enough to build 15,000 big bombers, 70,000 fighting planes, 45 capital warships, etc.

More people are killed by automobiles in the United States every year than Hitler's bombers are killing in the English isles, declared the Portlander.

Portland accident records show that one out of every three in the city are involved in accidents during the year.
