Carnival Set For McKinley School Feb. 19

McKINLEY-ELMONICA—Extensive plans were made at the meeting February 1 of the McKinley Community club for the carnival and bazaar to be held in the McKinley school house Saturday evening, February 19. The affair will be given by the club, to raise funds for the benefit of the school, and will offer a variety of entertainment for those who attend. There will be contests, games, cake walk, Dutch auction, a fish pond, fortune teller etc. An afghan, fancy work, aprons will be sold and also refreshments. A musical program will be presented by talent from the community and school children. No admission will be charged, but it is hoped that all patrons will come prepared to invest in the fun and entertainment. Enjoy a good time and help swell the benefit fund at the same time.

Mrs. Dan O'Meara entertained last Thursday afternoon with a shower for Mrs. Paul Kelly. Twenty-six guests were present.

County 'Over Top' Fourth War Loan

the ship. He likened a war bond to a sack full of life, liberty and happiness—the more you buy, the more you'll have.

Other servicemen who appeared locally were Pfc. Howard L. Stith of Santa Ana, Cal.; Pfc. Raymond C. Shifman of San Francisco, Cal., and Pfc. Raymond H. Webb of Nebraska, and R. 2/c Kenneth Kearney of Anacortes, Wash., all stationed in or near Hillsboro; MOMM 2/c Geore Wesley Lincoln of Hillsboro route 3, and Leo Ward, Hillsboro merchant marine engineer.

Announcement that Washington county had gone "over the top" on the Fourth War Loan was made by J. L. Searcy, Hillsboro campaign chairman. The county has never failed to meet a quota in the war effort and will never fail, he declared. Searcy pointed out that the sale of "E" bonds was still about $100,000 short of the quota set for these securities and urged greater emphasis on these bonds between now and the end of the campaign February 15. He expressed appreciation for the efforts of volunteer solicitors, particularly the local Business and Professional Women's club that handled the house-to-house canvass in Hillsboro.

Thomas H. Bailey, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the war finance committee, acted as master of ceremonies. Members of the local Red Cross motor corps served as ushers.

Special afternoon matinee was run by Phelps for grade school children. All schools oversold war bond quota.

Similar premieres were held Tuesday night at Forest Grove, Tigard and Beaverton.

Prowlers Loot Apartments Here

Prowlers broke into four downtown Hillsboro apartments Sunday afternoon, according to reports to Sheriff J. W. Connell. Mrs. S. W. Melhuish, proprietor of the Melhuish apartments, declared that two men came to her apartment Sunday afternoon seeking information and it is believed these were the men who robbed the apartments.

Miss Elizabeth Ott lost a camera, some cash and jewelry from her apartment in the Melhuish building. At the Bank Annex apartments, Miss Dorothy Reese reported the loss of a diamond ring, a wrist watch and some war savings stamps. Two other apartments in the Bank Annex were looted, deputies reported.

Third theft of gasoline ration stamps from a Forest Grove service station in a little over a month was reported Sunday to the sheriff. The most recent robbery occurred at the Beaman service station Saturday night.

Loot consisting of $80 in currency, a quantity of checks and gasoline ration stamps was stolen from the Standard Oil service station at Forest Grove Saturday night, according to a report to the sheriff's office. Entry was gained by breaking out a window in the shop.

Small amount of cash was stolen from the Central grade school at Forest Grove Monday night. The intruders also ate a cake that was in the school cafeteria. A car owned by Clare Walker of Forest Grove was stolen the same night and recovered the next day at Seaside.

Sentence of 30 days in the county jail was meted out to Jarvis Smith, 41, of Beaverton Saturday when he appeared before Circuit Judge R. Frank Peters on a contempt of court charge. He was arrested Friday.

George Joseph Harders, 43, of Vernonia was arrested Saturday on a charge of being drunk on a public highway. He was fined $10 and costs.

Home Looks Good to New Guinea Veteran

1943, and saw its first action below Salamaua the first part of July. Sgt. Grogan doesn't recall the exact date, but he does remember that they had a "noisy Fourth of July." His battery didn't make the beach landing, but went in shortly afterwards up the beach. During the balance of the campaign the batteries "leap-frogged" along the beach.

Recalling his first time under fire, Sergeant Grogan declared without hesitation that he was really scared. "We had a job to do and we did it," he said. "No man is made who isn't afraid under such circumstances, and no man is made who doesn't know how to pray."

Japs Break Through

Once during the 59 day battle the Jap infantry broke through to the artillery and the local unit stood them off for seven days until Australian infantrymen moved in to move the Japs back. In 77 days of jungle fighting the 41st division pushed the Japs nine miles and took Salamaua, Grogan declared.

Although hospitalized just before the fall of Salamaua, Grogan got out of the hospital and rejoined his outfit long enough to move up into the captured city. "After I'd gone that far, I figured I'd better see it all," he recalled.

Salamaua had been quite a small city with a bank, stores and an airport, the sergeant stated. After more than five months of hammering by artillery and air bombardment, there wasn't much left of it when the Hillsboro outfit moved in, he said.

Young Grogan probably knows how his mother used to feel when dinner got cold waiting for the family because he has been cooking for the local outfit ever since it was "activated" September 15, 1940. Lots of meals were interrupted by gun fire and the boys had to dive into fox holes. When it was all over they had to come back to a cold meal.

The food was good, admitted Grogan, and he declared proudly that the boys "really went for the biscuits and doughnuts I fixed in an oven made out of a 50-gallon drum." He proved his point by recalling that the Japs started shelling the area on "doughnut day" and the boys hit the fox-holes. "In the middle of the attack one of the kids stuck his head out and yelled: 'Hey, Grogan! Got seconds on the doughnuts?' You can't beat guys like that."

The artillery worked close up behind the infantry in New Guinea, Grogan pointed out. They were shelled almost every day and the tarpaulin over the kitchen had 15 shrapnel holes in it at the end of the campaign.

Fox holes are a soldier's best friend, he declared. Some of them may have a foot and a half of water in them but when the shelling starts it makes no difference.

Leather equipment molds and goes to pieces fast in New Guinea, according to the young sergeant. It rains about three times a day and comes down in torrents. Guns are hard to keep in shape but they take a lot of punishment. Grogan recalled that the men washed out muddy guns in puddles and went right on shooting.

The war bonds that the folks back home buy means that the men on the fighting front will continue to get the best of equipment to finish up the war and get home, the artilleryman declared. Every man in the unit is buying war bonds, he said, and they like to know that the people at home are backing them up with bond purchases, too.

Sergeant Grogan, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Grogan of Hillsboro, enlisted in the local national guard battery with his brother Bill September 15, 1940, and went with the outfit to Fort Lewis in Washington. They went overseas March 18, 1942, and were in Australia for eight months.

Grogan, who was an outstanding athlete at Hilhi, wears the Southwest Pacific campaign bar with a star for the Salamaua battle area, the National Defense ribbon for service outside the United States and another ribbon for service prior to Pearl Harbor.

PRECIOUS WATER—A doughboy on the Italian front fills his canteen cup with water from one of the big containers used to carry this precious commodity to the fighting men at the front. The chances are that this can came for miles by mule and manback so that this and other soldiers would not go thirsty. Back them up by buying War Bonds.
