"Shop Now, Mail In November," Urges Postman

Public response to the post office department's "Shop Now! Mail in November" campaign is good but needs to be better, according to Postmaster General Frank C. Walker.

"Extraordinary postwar conditions face us," Mr. Walker said. "Unless more people buy and mail this month the postal service cannot do its job of delivering all Christmas gifts on time.

"It is not pleasing to us to have to ask the American people to mail packages in fair advance of the delivery date. We do so only because it has to be done. The job is a tremendous one, but we are confident that it will be done because we know from experience that given sound reasons Americans cooperate magnificently.

"Unprecedented shortages of man power and transportation facilities growing out of the war compel early mailing. The postal service has given 30,000 experienced employees to the armed forces and 300,000 railroad workers have gone to war. Equally serious is the fact that rail and other transport facilities are taxed to the limit with the great burden of war traffic which all of us know must take precedence.

"In a great number of our 43,000 offices the man power situation is critical. The 200,000 extra workers whom we normally recruited to handle the swollen Christmas volume of mail were able to work long hours of overtime and to do heavy work. This cannot be expected from the women and high school boys and girls to whom in large part we must look this year to meet the situation.

"The way in which everyone responded in making it possible for us to handle a volume of 70,000,000 parcels for the armed forces overseas leaves no doubt in my mind that the November Christmas mailing will be equally successful. I ask for the help of the press, radio, business advertisers, civic groups and all Americans in making it possible for the postal service to do its work.

"We urge everyone to buy now, mail in November and mark gifts 'Do not Open Until Christmas.'"

New Type Report Cards Now Used At Grade Schools

Departing from established custom in pupil report cards is now being used at local grade schools, according to J. W. Hunter, superintendent. The new report, which is issued quarterly, gives the usual "S" and "U" ratings in the child's efforts relative to ability, but in addition there is information on standing in the basic subjects as taken from an objective test in each subject. This phase of the report concerns children from the fourth to eighth grades, inclusive.

Reports given by teachers of Class A (kindergarten) and first and second grades are a little different from the one used at R. V. Barnes school. David Hill reports show the highest possible score that could be obtained on the objective test; the average for the particular class that the child is in; the average for all the classes of that grade (there are three classes in each of the fourth and fifth grades) and lastly the child's standing on the test. Such a report gives the child and the parent information as to how well the child is doing in relation to the whole group involved.

R. V. Barnes report takes a somewhat different turn. This report shows the range of grade levels of accomplishment as revealed by the test and then shows at which level the particular child stands. For instance, there are 38 children in the three sections of the sixth grade. On the social science test or on any other test of another subject, we might find that the poorest informed children of that grade would go down to a fourth grade level; more being at fifth grade level; the largest number at the sixth grade level; a lesser number at the seventh grade level; and still fewer at the eighth grade level or even above that. Such a report shows not only at which grade level accomplishment a child stands but also shows the child where he stands in relationship to the whole grade.

Reports used at both the above schools also give a S and U estimate of the child's accomplishment in social growth and in work habits. This part of the report ought to be as of much concern and in some cases even more than the report on subject matter placement. Parents old. In all cases where the report of the child is unsatisfactory the parent should arrange with the principal of the building to come to school to talk with the teachers about the child. There is no satisfactory substitute for such an interview.

The school plans to use the regular standardized test at the close of the second quarter which comes in January.

WAC Recruiters Here on Monday

First Lt. Barbara S. Smith, M Sgt. Sylvester Sonkowski and Sgt. Billie Clark, WAC recruiters from Portland, will be in Hillsboro, Forest Grove and Tillamook for five days, beginning Monday, November 27, to interview eligible candidates for the Women's Army Corps, according to Maj. R. P. Cody, head of Oregon WAC recruiting district, Portland. The recruiting team will spend Monday, November 27, in Hillsboro.

Because of increased demands for more and more WACs to serve with the army air forces, the army ground forces and the army service forces—especially the medical department—WAC recruiters are renewing their efforts to contact every woman in Oregon eligible for the Women's Army Corps, Major Cody stated.

WACs now perform more than 200 types of jobs with all branches of the army and the surgeon general of the United States has asked for more medical, dental and X-ray technicians for the medical department. Under the new medical department program special training will be given those women who qualify otherwise for the Women's Army Corps but who lack the medical training.

earth and good will toward men. In these seals enclosed there is indeed magic and hope for through them and your generosity we are able to continue on to our ultimate goal of completely ridding the world of tuberculosis.

"This year, too, we mark a milestone in tuberculosis work. In Oregon we are attempting a mass x-ray program to offer chest examination to all the people. This costs money and the greater part of this money must come from the annual sale of Christmas Seals. Your purchase of Christmas Seals will make you an active participant in this offensive.

"That we have made great progress you well know, but our steps into the future must be taller. So again we ask you to buy Christmas Seals and use them on all your Christmas mail promptly—for through them we shall continue toward our goal. Each sheet is one dollar and we will gladly send you more if you wish them."

Soldier Killed Auto Accident

Pvt. Julius H. Boyce, Jr., of Ft. Lewis, Wash., was instantly killed early Tuesday morning when he was run over by a car on the highway near Banks. Investigation revealed that the young soldier had gotten out of his car about a half-mile south of Banks, and fallen and was lying in the pavement when struck.

Pvt. Boyce, who had just finished his training with an engineer construction battalion and was ready to go overseas, left Montesano, Wash., early Monday afternoon with a companion, Cpl. Joan L. Moore, also of Ft. Lewis. The latter had been visiting friends at Portland. The accident occurred at 2:30 a. m. and William Dawley of Banks was driver of the car which struck Boyce.

The young soldier was a resident of Washington, Ark.

Coroner Fred Sewell and Chief Deputy Sheriff R. H. Busch investigated.
