Methodists Plan Mission Meeting

As a part of the "Missionary Advance" being carried across the United States by the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, members of Methodist churches in a wide area around Portland will gather in the First Methodist church, Portland, on Monday and Tuesday, November 8 and 9, for special denominational meetings with speakers of national standing. Bishop Gerald H. Kennedy will preside and speak at the opening session.

The Portland meeting is one of a series of such gatherings in 32 cities, following the recent assembly of the Foreign Missions Conference when 66 missionary agencies of the United States and Canada jointly planned to double the number of missionaries now serving overseas in view of the needs of the world, and to raise an estimated $150,000,000 of additional funds to send their ministerial, educational and medical services and personnel into "the remotest corners of the earth." This promises to be the greatest enlargement of Protestant foreign missions since their founding more than a century ago.

Nursing Needs To Be Studied

The Oregon State Nurses' association has undertaken to make a state-wide study of nursing resources and needs. Assisting in the survey is Miss Edythe Barnes of Washington, D. C., nurse educational consultant, United States Public Health service.

The demand for nurses the last few years has grown more rapidly than the supply. Advances in medical science, membership in hospitalization plans, expanding public health facilites—these as well as the increasing population and a favorable economic situation explain this increase in demand.

New and expanding health programs, such as those in cancer, tuberculosis, heart disease and mental health, are bringing more patients to doctors for early diagnosis and treatment. This also creates a greater demand for more nurses.

Intention of the survey is to count every professional nurse, practical nurse, nurses aide and orderly in the state in an effort to determine the extent of the difference between supply of nurses and the demand or nursing service.

Churchmen Set Quarterly Meet

The quarterly meeting of the Hillsboro Churchman's council has been set for 8 o'clock tonight (Thursday) at Methodist church. Election of 1949 officers is on the agenda.

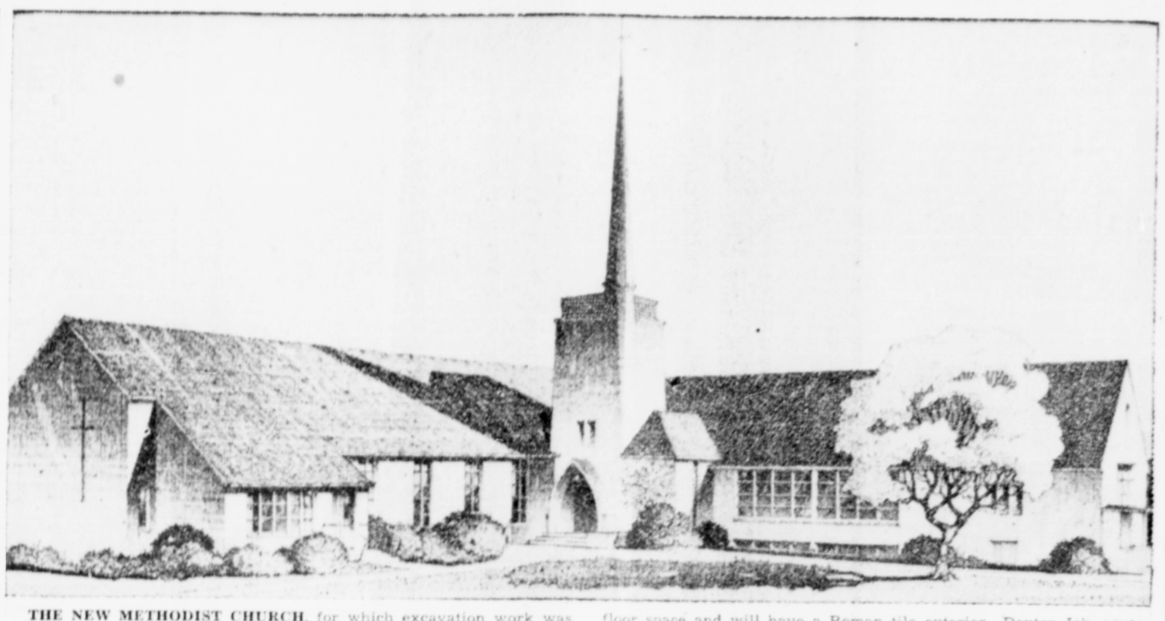
Various topics relating to interchurch and community affairs will be brought up for discussion. All churchmen of the city, both laymen and ministers, are urged to attend.

Chest Campaign Nears End Here

The possibility that Hillsboro's Community Chest drive will be completed by the end of this week was voiced Wednesday by Glenn Harris, campaign chairman.

About three-quarters of the $1267.50 quota had been collected Wednesday, the chairman said. As an aid to Chest campaigns in the future, a list of contributions is being maintained for the 1948 drive, Harris reported.

It Pays to Patronize Argus Advertisers



THE NEW METHODIST CHURCH, for which excavation work was started last week at the Eighth and Lincoln street site, is shown here as an artist's sketch. The structure bears an estimated cost figure of $150,000. The L-shaped building will contain 13,000 feet of floor space and will have a Roman tile exterior. Dexter Job, route 4, Hillsboro, is the general contractor, concrete work will be done by Van Dorn Red-E-Mix of Forest Grove and the excavation is being done by Gerald Baker of Hillsboro.

Mountain Home

Editor's Note — This letter was sent to us by Mrs. Jane Joyce, Mountain Home correspondent, in place of her regular column. As for printing the advertisements by the Knox Law Improvement Committee, they are being run in all newspapers in the state as political advertisements in accord with the rights of a free press in which people have the right to express themselves for or against the measures. As for the measure in question the Argus this week expresses itself as being in opposition to any liberalization of the Knox law.

October 16, 1948

Editor:

First I want to say to you that I am indignant that you are printing in the Graphic the advertising of the so-called "Knox Law Improvement Committee;" and I know a great many people who share my indignation, though they will not tell you about it, and you know that these people are not by any means the worst people in Newberg. It is not the worst people who oppose the sale of liquor.

Now that you have printed so many of these advertisements, I hope you will let me say something on the other side of tthe question.

And first of all along that line, let me say that the pretense that this is a measure to promote temperance should not deceive anybody with any considerable degree of intelligence. The liquor interests are not in business for their health, nor to promote temperance nor any other phase of morality; they are in business to make money, and the more liquor they sell the more money they will make. They want the Knox law liberalized, and are spending a lot of money to have it changed, because they know that the change will increase their business by increasing the sale of liquor. Let nobody be deceived. If you want more liquor sold and consumed in Oregon, you'll vote for this sale-by-the-drink. If not, you'll vote against the measure.

And it ought to be evident that Oregon is consuming quite enough liquor, and is on its way to becoming a drunken state quite fast enough. The sale of liquor in our state-controlled liquor stores increased from $4.00 per capita for the year that ended June 30, 1936, to $39.50 per capita for the year that ended June 30, 1947, an increase every year till the per capita consumption was nearly ten times what it had been when we first left the days of prohibition and entered the era of the State Liquor Control Commission. And this is only the hard liquor sold through the state liquor stores, and does not include the sale of beer, light wines, moonshine, etc. There are almost exactly half as many liquor permits as the total population of the state, counting everybody, men, women and children. These are not guesswork figures, but figures furnished by the State Liquor Control Commission, based on an actual sales and government population figures. And now the "Knox Law Improvement Committee" wants the law "improved" so that it will be still easier to get liquor and still more will be sold and consumed.

Is anybody going to be fooled by this argument about selling liquor by the drink so as to keep liquor out of cars? The man who wants liquor in his car can have it there, and will, in addition to what he has consumed by the glass. It will not be "liquor by the glass or by the bottle," it will be liquor by the glass and by the bottle.

This argument that the harder it is to get liquor the more people will try to get it is foolish on the face of it, for if it were true the liquor interests would want to make it harder, not easier, to get it. If their argument were true, they'd be wanting to strengthen the Knox Law, not weaken it. They'd want to make liquor harder to get so as to increase their business, not to open the way for hundreds and potentially thousands of places to sell liquor by the drink. Make it easy to get so people will drink less? It is an insult to intelligence. The liquor people want folks to drink more so that they, the liquor people, will make more money.

The people of the state of Oregon are going to decide by their vote not the issue of liquor by the glass or by the bottle, but if they vote for this liquor-by-the-glass law they are providing for liquor by the glass and by the bottle. All the liquor forces, the wet forces, are back of this movement for liquor-by-the-glass. The church forces and all the dry organizations are against it. "Let's quit kidding ourselves? Let's not let the wet forces "kid" us. The passing of this law will increase the sale of drink, will increase drunkenness, will increase traffic accidents, will give us hundreds if not thousands of additional liquor outlets, and will make a situation worse than that of the old saloon, when, according to this advertisement "there was no supervision, no restriction of any kind." Let's bury this wet measure so deep that it will be hard to resurrect it.

Sincerely yours,
LEVI T. PENNINGTON.

The filbert harvest has been completed here and many growers have seeded the cover crop during the favorable weather.

Don Hagg came home last Wednesday from St. Vincents hospital where he received medical care for injuries suffered in an automobile accident ten days earlier. He has recovered completely.
