THE EUGENE CITY GUARD.

SATURDAY.....JAN. 25, 1890.

Portland Needs an Examiner.

The telegraphic editor of the Oregonian has an exuberant imagination. When a grange suggests the nomination of an agriculturist or a mechanic for Governor, the aforesaid exuberant imagination represents in flaming headlines that "Farmer's oppose Pennoyer's re-election." Portland should sustain a newspaper that would fairly and impartially report public news. The Oregonian is arbitrary, conceited and partisan to an extent never before equaled by a metropolitan journal. That city is too large and progressive to long tolerate its autocratic reign.

Secretary Blaine is said to have received $1,200 for his article on protection in the North American Review—at the rate of $120 a page. It is wonderful how a man of prominence is paid for rehashing old saws! Now anybody else would not have received more than $120 or $1 20 for the same thing.

Valley Record: The Yreka people are as proud of their branch railroad line as a kid is of his first pair of red-top boots and knee-breeches. The enterprise cost them $100,000, and pays more than its running expenses. But its direct revenue is of no consequence, considering the vast amount of benefit it has been to the community.

The dire results of boundary lines quarrel was set forth recently by two Indiana farmers, who could not agree where the line should run. One shot and killed his neighbor and wounded his neighbor's child, then as the only climatic ending of the tragedy that common sense left, he turned the gun on himself and blew the top of his own head off.

Sir Oscar Jennings, the noted English physician, says quinine and antipyrine will cure the influenza. The quinine kills the microbe and the antipyrine destroys the pain. He calls la grippe "a bastard pulmonary rheumatism."

Palouse Weather.

The Colfax Commoner of Jan. 17, says: The first flury of snow, this season, fell on the night of December 15th, covering the ground to a depth of about three inches. Since that time the fall of snow has steadily continued, with short intervals, and it is now estimated that the Palouse country is covered with an average depth of two feet of the "beautiful." Much wind has also prevailed, and the snow in many places is piled up to a great depth. On the south hill points great bare spots can be seen, while on the north side of the hills, and in the gulches, drifts from five to twenty feet are encountered. The weather has not been cold, only for a few days did the mercury drop down below zero. While the fall of snow is probably greater than this country has experienced for many years, there is hardly, if any, suffering among stock. Parties who are feeding, find no difficulty in attending to their stock, and horses and cattle on the range will be able to eke out a living from the south hillsides for several weeks yet. This heavy fall of snow is welcomed by most people, who understand that it means an abundant wheat crop next fall. The ground is only slightly frozen, and when the thaw comes comes it will receive a thorough saturation. Of course, should this weather continue longer than the feed holds out, and its is hardly probable that it will, some stock may suffer.
