The Democratic Times.

Official Paper for Jackson, Josephine & Lake.

FRIDAY,.....JULY 11, 1879.

LATEST advices do not ascribe the recent advance in the price of wheat to Republican predictions of a Democratic revolution.

THE political horoscope denotes a substantial vindication of the "blundering" course pursued by the majority in Congress. Democratic "blunders" somehow always result in Republican annihilation.

THE Republican managers, by their course in Congress, have already made the issue for the ensuing national contest. The real question now is whether the party of Fraud in 1876 shall be the party of Force in 1880. And the people are fully alive to the situation as it is presented.

THE Mercury becomes righteously indignant because the duty on quinine is so high, allowing a few to become rich at the expense of the many. Bro. Cornell's plea for the ague-stricken denizens of Oregon is one tempered with philanthropy; though a corresponding reduction in the tax on whisky would in a great measure atone for this discrimination against quinine. We call for the ayes and noes on this proposition.

WHEN Governor Thayer telegraphed to the Secretary of War, at the beginning of the last Indian outbreak, that a temporary issue of arms was necessary to enable him to protect the settlers, he received an answer as follows: "You have more than your quota of arms." His Excellency, however, was equal to the emergency. He telegraphed in reply: "We have more than our quota of Indians." The required arms were at once issued.

THERE are some free to make a point against the Democratic majority by asserting that the extra session of Congress cost the people a vast amount of money, estimated at $1,000,000. While these public economists are manipulating the figures to establish their charges, it will not be amiss to inquire how much they are willing to allow for the obtuseness of their man Hayes and the cost of his Presidential backbone, furnished by Chandler, Robeson & Co. These are important items to be taken into account.

THE treasonable utterances of another "Confederate Brigadier" reverberate on our ear and we are horrified to learn that in his address at the decoration of the graves of the rebel dead at Frederick, Md., Congressman J. C. S. Blackburn said: "The stern arbitrament of the sword was given against us; nor is there in this broad land today one who would seek to assert again by arms the principles for which these lives were given." How long are the delicate sensibilities of the "trooly loil" leaders of the Republican party to be offended by such rebel sentiments?

THE Democratic State Convention of California made an egregious blunder in refusing to endorse the Democrats nominated by the New Constitution Party and completing the ticket with candidates of its own selection. Not an iota of principle would thus have been sacrificed and the election of a greater portion of its nominees could at the same time have been placed beyond peradventure of a doubt. With its strength impaired to a great extent by the inroads of new political movements known as the Workingmen's party and "Honorable Bilks," it cannot hope to be entirely successful against the united hosts of Republicanism, held together as they are by the cohesive power of Federal plunder. By the time the September election rolls around it will become very evident that party fealty should be tempered with a fair degree of strategy in contests of this nature.

THE most important transfer of property that has occurred on the northwest coast for years was consummated at Portland on the 1st. By this transaction the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, the greatest monopoly that ever infested our State, gives way to another not one whit less exacting in the corporation headed by Jay Gould, the king of New York stock speculators, and a monopolist in more than the ordinary meaning of the term. That the people are to be congratulated on this change is rather dubious, unless consolation is to be found in the hope that it ensures the introduction of unlimited capital into Oregon which may be used in the construction of a railroad from the Columbia river to connect with the Union Pacific, in which Gould is largely interested. We fear that our young and flourishing State is becoming more and more entangled in the meshes of soulless corporations who would not hesitate to consume its very life's blood. A transfer from resident to foreign monopolists is not by any means always for the best.

THE CELEBRATION OF OUR NATAL DAY.

Reports from every portion of the country denote that our national holiday was more generally observed than ever before. While preparations were not as extensive and the display not as gorgeous as characterized the celebration of the Centennial year, yet the patriotism of the people seemed more thoroughly diffused than ever before, and fewer neglected to manifest it in some way. Whether this will be accepted as an auspicious omen of national progression we shall leave for others to translate.

The boom of anvils early Friday morning awakened the inhabitants of our town to the realization of the fact that the Fourth of July had arrived. The day opened quite gloomily here, the weather being chilly, with rain threatening and a stiff breeze blowing during the entire time. These drawbacks did not prevent a large crowd from assembling—one that compared favorably with those of previous affairs. At about ten o'clock the procession moved from town under the direction of E. D. Foudray, chief marshal, and his aids, T. T. McKenzie and Wm. Bybee, and took up a line of march for the Grove, headed by the Jacksonville Brass Band, which enlivened the day with new and popular music well rendered. Several hundred people had congregated when the exercises of the day were opened by a patriotic air from the band, which was followed by a prayer appropriate to the occasion by the chaplain, Rev. M. A. Williams. The Declaration of Independence was next read by Miss Emily Brown in a clear tone and excellent manner. Then came the oration of Robt. A. Miller, which was quite a happy effort, abounding in interesting data and choice sentiment. It was also well delivered and elicited much favorable comment. Dinner was soon afterward announced and well laden baskets were brought forward and ebullient patriotism vented itself on the delicious viands that had been provided. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in various ways, the numerous amusements that had been devised affording much sport to participants and spectators alike. There was jar-spearing, and foot-racing by boys and girls, and Uncle Jimmy's duck-play, and so forth. The last mentioned game consisted of placing a duck in a box with a hole in the top, through which the bird was expected to thrust its head, when the players would attempt an exhibition of their skill by shying a stick at it. But alas! the duck was too modest a fowl and refused to show itself, which brought the game to an unsatisfactory termination. By this time the sun was rapidly descending in the west, and approaching evening gave warning that a conclusion of festivities was at hand. By six o'clock the greater portion of the assemblage had departed and the grounds, which, but a short time before had been a scene of gleeful animation, were soon well nigh deserted. The party at the Club Room in the evening proved an entire success. The hall was crowded to its utmost capacity with gay votaries of Terpsichore, who, not until the gray dawn of morning had made its appearance, saw fit to wend their way homeward. The music furnished by Messrs. Schmidt, Luy and Hull, was of an excellent character, and was supplemented by a superb repast at the New State Hotel thoroughly appreciated. The ball concluded the celebration of the 103d anniversary of the event glorious and all-important in the history of our country, all having occasion to regret that it does not occur more frequently.

The celebration at McCoy's grove, near Willow Springs, was none the less an unqualified success. Many from a distance were no doubt deterred from attending by the gloomy weather prevailing that morning; but the crowd was, if anything, larger than the one present at the celebration in Jacksonville. Estimates made by those who had an opportunity of judging, place the number at not less than 1,100 persons, who came from every portion of the country. The committee of arrangements was assiduous in its duties, neglecting not the slightest detail, and that its efforts were eminently successful all will attest. The exercises were very interesting and duly appreciated, comprising prayer by Elder M. Peterson, reading of the Declaration of Independence by Frank Sifers, and an eloquent oration by Nat. Langell, all of which was interspersed with excellent music by the tuneful glee club. The equestrian quadrille and lancer's tournament proved a prominent feature and displayed to good effect the equestrianism of the ladies and gentlemen participating as well as the training they had received at the hands of Major Colvig. The grounds had been furnished with a spacious dancing pavilion by Colvig & Rowe, and the afternoon and evening were agreeably spent in "tripping the light fantastic toe" to the dulcet strains of Prof. Scott's string band. The whole affair was enlivened by a short and pithy address from Mrs. Duniway, who did not fail to avail herself of this opportunity to score "those awful men." Various amusements were also afforded and the "wee sma' hours of morn" had arrived before the last could prevail upon themselves to conclude the festivities of the event. Nothing occurred to mar the pleasures of the day, a fact that added greatly to the success of the celebration.

Ashland, Phœnix, and Big Butte also celebrated the Fourth of July in appropriate style. Full accounts of these celebrations have failed to reach us, but they are said to have passed off with eclat.

JUST THE TRUTH.

Gen. Ewing, the Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio, declared the great issue of our times in plain and impressive language in his speech at Washington the other day. "The people of Ohio," said he, "have too much patriotism and enlightened self-interest to consent that sectional strife shall be protracted ten years after all the settlements of the war have been accepted and acquiesced in everywhere throughout the country. They demand that this settlement having been accepted, prosperity and concord shall return hand in hand; and, above all, Ohio, the first born of the struggles of our Revolutionary sires, will never submit to surrender to any party the liberties that were meant for mankind."

This declaration of Gen. Ewing forms of itself a platform on which all patriotic and far-seeing American citizens should rally together in a common effort for the preservation of free institutions.

In such a contest as that now engaged between the right of the people to elect their own rulers and the pretensions of the Republican party to keep themselves in power by military force and by fraud, no American worthy of the name should hesitate for a moment on which side to range himself. Self-government and the freedom of elections must be maintained!

All honor to the Democracy of Ohio for nominating as their candidate a man in whom the spirit of liberty is alike ardent and resolute!

Racing on the Northwest Coast.

As our State makes rapid strides forward as a commonwealth, an increasing partiality for fine horseflesh manifests itself, which is emulated in no small degree by our territorial neighbor, Washington. The races at Hillsboro, and at Walla Walla, in which some of the best blood of the Coast participated, are amply in proof of this. At the former place the California trotting mare "Nellie Patchen" defeated "Parrott" and "Lady Faustina," though not before each of the others had won two heats, making the fast time of 2:31½; while Joe Taylor's "Frank Hastings," by "Monday," beat "Ryestraw" by half a length in a mile and a half dash in 2:46½; and Miller & Bybee's "Mollie Miller" came in ahead of Tillie W., another three-year-old, running a mile in 1:50. The Derby at Walla Walla was won by "Winters," by "Norfolk," defeating "Trade Dollar," "Tidal Wave" and a field of fine three-year-olds, after a very close struggle. It is quite probable that other speed contests will transpire before the State Fair races, which promise to be more than usually interesting.

Perhaps.

We suppose the Republican managers will consider the action of the Democratic majority in adjourning Congress without honoring Hayes' veto of the appropriation bill providing for the payment of U. S. Marshals and their deputies with even a hearing, as revolutionary. They can make the most of their discomfiture, for the people have themselves become tired of paying supernumerary Federal officials for interfering in elections, however important they may be to the Republican cause.

Races at Yreka.

The races at Yreka on the 4th and 5th were interesting, though no fast time was made. The first race was a single dash of half a mile and was won by Edson's horse Charles in 52 seconds. Flitner's Ida Hammond won the heat race; best time 1:59. The single dash of a mile was won by Sutherland's Orphan Girl in 1:54, while Sutherland's Rock walked off with the purse in the half-mile heat race in 52½ and 58.
