CAMPAIGN NOTES.

Democrats to the front.

Vote for Hancock and English, the people choice, next Tuesday.

A vote for Garfield and Arthur in 1880 is a vote for Grant and Empire in 1884.

Things looked badly for a while at Gettysburg. But the battle was won notwithstanding.

The silliest excuse we have ever heard for voting the Republican ticket was "fear of the Southern people."

Dr. Wm. Adams, a life-long Republican and founder of the party in this State, has announced himself a supporter of Hancock and English.

Gen. Weaver, the Greenback candidate for President, is a full cousin of Garfield, and is doing everything in his power to make the latter President.

It is unfortunately true that the decline of our American foreign commerce dates from thecoming into office of the Republican party.—Boston Herald, Ind. Rep.

We think a Minister of the Gospel who votes for Garfield for President has but little respect for the precepts of religion, or regard for the example he sets his fellow men.

A Democratic procession was fired upon in Wilmington, Delaware, last Saturday from a housetop, the assailants being negroes. Six persons were severely wounded, and two fatally.

Plaisted, Governor-elect of Maine, took the stump in Indiana for Hancock and Landers immediately after his election, and yet we are told he is a Republican. The woods are full of such just now.

It would be interesting to know just how much money the Republicans spent in Ohio and Indiana, just where they got it, and just how they spent it. But that is information that will never be imparted to a curious public.

Hon. Lyman Trumbull, in his great speech of August 30th in Illinois, makes the point that no Republican need sustain the present-day Republican party as a matter of political duty, since the party itself has abandoned itself.

The Buffalo Courier thinks that if the course of Weaver in Alabama did not make it plain that he is in the employment of the Republican party, his conduct during the Maine canvass left little possibility for doubt as to his renegadism.

Grant's opinion of Hancock in 1867 will have about as much weight here as his opinion of Sumner in 1872, and it will be high time for him to twit Hancock of Presidential ambition when people have forgotten his own struggle for the third term.

The Republican party cannot and will not take upon itself the sins of Colfax, or Patterson, or Ames, or Kelly, or Garfield. Rather it will be true to its mission, and place the seal of its condemnation upon them all.—Concord Monitor, (Republican) February 20, 1873.

In the Congressional Record of the Forty-Third Congress, Vol. II, part 5, first session, June 13, 1874, page 4,967, may be seen how Garfield and other Republicans opposed Luttrell's bill to employ free white labor at the Mare Island Navy Yard in San Francisco harbor.

It should be noted that the very merchants, who the Republican organs tell us are in a panic because they believe the South will control the Government, bankrupt the country and kill business, are working like beavers to sell all the goods they can to Southern merchants on the usual terms.

"Hancock is a fine soldier. At the time he was named a Major General we were not very good friends, and my personal preferences were for Schofield; but I felt Hancock had earned the promotion. I have great respect for Hancock as a man and as a soldier."—[Ulysses S. Grant before Hancock's nomination.

Florida is the only Southern State of which the Republicans have any hopes. The contest is to be fought in New York, and as that great State goes, so goes the battle in November. The Republicans have won a single point in a game where the odds are still heavily against them. Indiana merely offsets Maine.

An Indianapolis dispatch to the New York Herald, prior to the election, predicted the defeat of the Democrats in consequence of the lack of organization and want of money. It says the Democrats did not have $25,000 to use in the entire campaign, while the Republicans were well supplied with the corruption fund and repeaters.

Judge C. P. Nicoll, long a leading Republican of Jersey City and a Republican since the formation of the party, spending his money and energies in its behalf, announces his purpose to support Hancock in a letter, in which he says: "I believe there is far less danger of Hancock being used by the South than there is of Garfield being used by corrupt politicians."

Gen. Butler recently discussed the Western elections at length, and foretold a Democratic victory in November in Indiana, and prophesied a sweeping success along the line. He said: "There is no earthly doubt that Indiana is Democratic. The loss of the State is largely attributed to repeaters, brought there by Republicans. One man took fifty from Alexandria, Virginia, and another twenty from the New York Custom-House.

New York, Oct. 16.—The National Democratic Committee believes that Hancock is all of 5,000 stronger in Indiana than Landers. The World attributes the loss in Indiana to local disaffections, the Indiana Supreme Court decision and bad financial record of Landers in the State. The Democratic column in November will be much stronger. Senator Randolph of New Jersey says the result in Ohio and Indiana will not affect chances of Democratic success in his State.

In referring to the efforts of the Republican leaders to disparage Gen. Hancock's military record, Gen. McCook, of Gen. Sherman's staff, the famous fighting General of Ohio, recently said: "There is not a soldier walks the earth with a better military record than General Hancock. I have never before heard that anything had been said against him. The opinion among army men, from General Sherman down to General Hancock, is the opinion held by me. He is one of the best men and soldiers the country has ever produced.

WHY GARFIELD WAS NOMINATED.

Ever since the Chicago convention nominated Gen. Garfield we have been trying to find some good reason why he became the choice of the convention. We could not think it was because of his honesty, as the Congressional records show that a committee of his own party, appointed by a Republican House of Representatives, declared that he had received shares of Credit Mobilier stock as a bribe to influence his action in any matter that might come before the House regarding the Credit Mobilier rascality. It could not be because of his truthfulness, because after he swore that he had never received a share of Credit Mobilier stock, it was proved that he was receiving dividends on ten shares of that stock. It could not be on account of his careful guarding of the public money when he was Chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, as it was proved and by himself acknowledged that he received a $5,000 fee from the pavement contractors in Washington because of his position and influence as Chairman of said committee. It could not have been because of his consistency, as it is well known that he is all things to all men—a free trader to free traders, a high tariff man to protectionists, a civil service reformer to civil service reformers, an advocate of the motto that to the victors belong the spoils to the stalwarts, an anti-Chinese man to the Pacific States, and in favor of Chinese immigration to the voters of the Middle and Eastern States. There is, then, only one reason why he can be a desirable candidate for the Republican party, and that is his mule-driving experience. It has been evident for some time that many independent Republicans were becoming fractious because of the way in which the leaders endeavored to use the party as an engine to keep alive the fires of sectionalism by appeals to the prejudices and passions of the voters, greatly to the injury of the whole country, and also because of the way in which the leaders endeavored to run the party as a machine to keep themselves perpetually in place and power; and these leaders evidently thought that Gen. Garfield's experience in keeping mules in the traces would be just the thing to hold the kicking members of the party from kicking out of the Republican harness, and therefore they nominated him. But as driving mules is one thing and driving free American voters an entirely different thing, it is doubtful if he can force the independents to still stick to the machine traces.

DEMOCRATIC ECONOMY.

In 1875 the Democrats recovered a majority in the House of Representatives, and they went to work at once to mend the matters of the people. To be sure their work was not available till the year afterward. In 1878 they had both branches of Congress, and the fruit of their labors then became clearly evident. Although Hayes' administration is Republican, yet he has been obliged to obey the law as made by the Democratic Congress.

Let us take a glance at some of these results as a comparison between the last "unadulterated" Radical administration and the administration with a full Democratic Congressional control.

Take, first, the receipts: For 1875, under Grant, the receipts of customs were $157,167,722; under Hayes they were $186,522,064—an increase of $29,354,342. In 1875 the internal revenue receipts were $110,007,493; in 1880 they were $124,000,373—an increase of $13,592,880. In 1875 the total revenues from all sources were $284,020,771; in 1880 they were $333,526,610—an increase of $49,505,839.

Now turn to the expenditures: In 1875 the war department cost $41,120,645; in 1880, under Hayes, it cost $38,116,916—a decrease of $3,003,729. In 1875 the navy cost $21,497,626; in 1880 it cost $13,536,984—a decrease of $7,960,642. In 1875 the Indian Bureau cost $8,384,656; in 1880 it cost $5,945,457—a decrease of $2,439,209. In 1875 the total expenditures were $278,693,573, and in 1880 they were $267,642,959—a decrease of $11,050,614.

This decrease in the total expenditures would have been much larger but for the increase of pension payments in 1880 over those in 1875—the only item in which there was an increase. In 1875 the pension payments were $29,456,216; in 1880 they were $56,371,958. Leaving out this pension item the decrease in expenditures would have been $32,371,552 for the year. This shows the economy practiced by the Democratic Congress, and this is a foretaste of the economy that would rule the councils of a full Democratic government with the executive, the administration and legislature as one. The matter is worth thinking about.

BRICK VS. J. B. WEAVER.—This man Weaver is a native of Dayton, Ohio, and a cousin of James A. Garfield. He is a Republican disguised as a Greenbacker and nothing else. He has been a Republican officeholder under the State government of Iowa where he now resides, and was for six years and until the office was abolished, Assessor of Internal Revenues for the first district of Iowa under the Republican federal administration. This is the same Weaver who urged the Greenbackers of Georgia to unite with the Republicans there, that victory might perch on the fusion banner. In Maine, however, he tells his Greenback friends not to stand in on the fusion electoral ticket composed of four Greenbackers and three Democrats. In short he is doing all in his power to secure the election of his cousin, DeGolyer Garfield. No wonder Brick Pomeroy will have nothing to do with this Republican hireling.

GARFIELD was a great soldier. He was in the army just twenty-eight months, and in that time was away on leave of absence thirteen months. While his division was fighting he was stumping his State for Congress, and the roll reported him "absent on account of sickness." That is his war record.

All the Greenbackers of Republican antecedents voted the straight Republican ticket in Indiana on the 12th, and Democratic Greenbackers now swear they are going to vote for Hancock. They don't propose to be a tender to the Republican machine.

The finest stock of visiting cards ever brought to Oregon—gilt-edged, bevel-edged, plain white, snow-flake, chromo, etc.—has just been received at the TIMES office.

SOUTHERN CLAIMS.

(From the N. Y. Evening News, Sept. 15, 1880.)

The following letter settled the Southern Claims bug-bear in 1876. The attempt to revive it now is silly.

To the People of the United States:

We understand that it is now generally charged by the Republican leaders and press of the North that the Southern people expect that a change of administration of the Federal government and the advent of the Democratic reform party to power, will inure to their pecuniary benefit in securing for them payment for loss or damage to property suffered by them during the late war. In reply to this charge we declare that the Southern people have no such hope or expectation.

Their loss in debts incurred in support of the war and caused by emancipation is barred from payment by the Fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Compensation for all other injuries to their property caused by the war is prohibited by the law of nations and the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

They have, therefore, no hope or expectation of being reimbursed for either, and we denounce such charges as injurious and false. All we desire is peace, prosperity and just Government, giving us equal rights under the Constitution.

THE RECORD.

GARFIELD'S CREDIT MOBILIER RECORD BRIEFLY AND FULLY STATED BY A REPUBLICAN CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE.

I never owned, received, or agreed to receive any stock of the Credit Mobilier or of the Union Pacific Railroad, nor any dividends or profits arising from either of them.—[From his own sworn testimony before the Poland committee, January 14, 1873.

From Judge Poland's Report, Feb. 18, 1873—Garfield's testimony perjured.

The facts in regard to Mr. Garfield, as found by the committee, are that he agreed with Mr. Ames to take ten shares of Credit Mobilier stock, but did not pay for the same. Mr. Ames received the 80 per cent. dividend in bonds, and sold them for ninety-seven per cent. and also received the sixty per cent. cash dividend, which together with the price and interest, left a balance of $329. This sum was paid over to Mr. Garfield by a check on the Sergeant-at-Arms and Mr. Garfield then understood this sum was the balance of dividends after paying for the stock.

MCCLELLAN MAKES A SPEECH.—Trenton, N. J., October 16th.—Gov. McClellan addressed a Democratic meeting last evening. After a eulogy of Hancock he said: The Democratic party supported the South before the war, not because it liked slavery, but because it respected the Constitution. When the war came it opposed the South for similar reasons. Two things united the South before the war—slavery and anti-tariff. The former is dead, and the South is fast becoming a manufacturing country. So these elements no longer exist. The Southern man is mortal, continued the Governor, the same as we are, and all that makes the South solid is the pressure of federal hands and carpetbag government. Remove that pressure, and the Solid South will cease to be solid. He didn't believe a man, North or South, desired the payment of war claims. He had no idea the Democrats would injure the government by interfering with the tariff question. He saw no cause for discouragement in the recent skirmishes.

HOW IT WAS DONE IN OHIO.—The Republicans carried everything with a high hand in Cincinnati, Ohio. The police acted in the most partisan manner, and were aided as far as possible by the Federal officials. Mayor Jacob called out the First Regiment, Ohio State National Guard, and kept them under arms all day. Strange negroes were voted by the hundred over and over again, and when Democrats demanded their arrest they were either taken away from the polls by the police and released after turning the first corner or taken before United States Commissioner Hart, who held court in the office of the Chief of Police and by him released to go and repeat again and again. Besides the Republicans were provided with any amount of money, which they used most lavishly. The vote polled was enormous, and is far in excess of any ever cast here. The gain largely inures to the Republicans.

HANCOCK'S GREAT STRENGTH.—New York, October 19.—Ex-Governor Seymour says that "We did not count on Ohio, but did count on Indiana and still do. It is evident that local and special difficulties interfered with the success of the Democrats in the State elections which will not be encountered in the Presidential contest. It is certain that the Republicans threw into the State contest more men and money than they command in November. I think that General Hancock is stronger than any local candidate can be. He is entirely free from the disadvantages which affect candidates in State elections. The effect will be to make the Democrats fight more bravely in this State. The last ground taken by the Republican party which is an appeal to men's fears that a Democratic victory will hurt business, is not one that will bear scrutiny."

A GARFIELD VOTE LOST.—A young man named Eaton was arrested last week in Wasco county by Ben Simpson for robbing the mails. His father is postmaster and the young fellow has been "going through" the mails quite scientifically.
