THE OREGON SENTINEL

PASSENGERS OF THE WRECK.

The Panama Crescile, of June 12th, has the following particulars in regard to the passengers from the wreck of the Golden Rule:

The United States' steamers Huntsville and State of Georgia arrived at Aspinwall on the 11th inst., with the passengers of the Golden Rule. These people speak highly in praise of the kind treatment they received on the ships of war, but curse fearfully the captain of the Golden Rule. They state that on the 29th of May there was quite a jubilee on board, celebrating the Captain's birthday. A great quantity of liquors were drank and intoxication was prevalent among those who ought to have been steady looking after the ship. There was a fine lot of Cyprian beauties on their way to stock some houses of ill fame in California, and after the champagne had fitilated the participants, the Captain and other officers fraternized with the Cyprians in unbridled disorder. The orgie was unlimited, and save the second officer, and one or two besides, all the others appear to have lost their prudence and their wits. There was not the usual lookout for danger, and the ship was left to the mercy of Providence and the guidance of chance. About 20 or 30 minutes before the ship struck, the second officer, who was on watch, went and knocked at the captain's cabin, and told him that the ship was out of her course. The captain, who had an illicit companion with him, waxed wrath at being disturbed, and replied, "You be damed, the ship is all right, let her go along." The second officer, however, fearing trouble, went down to the engineer and directed him to slacken speed. The noise of the Roncador, which is the Spanish for "Roarer," was then heard, but too late for prevention. One woman tells us that she could easily have walked from the ship's side, after she had struck, to the Island. At the time of the mishap the moon was shining with its brightest rays. The roar of the water on the reef was distinctly heard by some of the passengers who were awake, but not being seafaring men, they had no thought that the breakers were ahead.

When the landing of people commenced permission was asked of the captain to open the baggage room, so that the passengers might save what they could. He gave them another surly "go to h—l and be d—d" sort of reply. Very few passengers saved a few things which they had near at hand. The provisions landed were nothing else than hard biscuits. On this and on a pint of water each per day, a scanty sustenance was made. The water was collected from the crevices in the rocks, and some was procured by means of the ship's condenser, which was landed. The suffering from exposure to the sun was intense, as the appearance of the people plainly indicate.

When the Huntsville and State of Georgia hove in sight, the joy of those poor castaways was frantic. Cheer followed cheer in wild and jubilant fury. The huts that were being built were knocked over in half mad glee, and tears of exultation coursed down cheeks that were already scared by the tears of grief.

The passengers state that their reception on the ships of war was the kindest and best that could be wished. Hot coffee was first served out, which was most acceptable to the feeble and famishing stomachs. Next an excellent meal was set before them, which was heartily relished. Afterwards an abundance of good water, cooled with the ice that Mr. Jackson had so graciously provided, was made accessible to all who was athirst. The officers and men of both ships were constant in their attentions to relieve the wants of the passengers, and to make the passage from Roncador to Aspinwall as comfortable as circumstances would allow. Too much praise cannot be given to the gallant men under Commanders Preble and Devins for their kindness. The rescued people are unceasing in their thanks, and their gratitude seems to know no bounds. But of Capt. Dennis, of the Golden Rule, every thing evil is said. The vocabulary of vile names has been exhausted in his condemnation, and no doubt the papers of San Francisco will be filled with pictures of his character. As it is unfair to condemn a man unheard, we will refrain from endorsing all that has been told to us; but if he be as bad as he is represented, God alone can help him in his defence.

When the passengers reached this city on the 11th, their forlorn condition excited the compassion of the bystanders. There were handsome, ladylike looking women, in soiled and bedraggled dresses, and their faces showed the fiery, scorching effects of a torrid sun. Many of the females and children were shoeless, and in tattered garments, their countenances were dejected and disconsolate, and told of hearts afflicted with past sufferings and for their heavy losses. D. M. Crowing, Mr. Sternburg and others, hastily collected all the small clothing they could find in town and distributed it among the half-naked little sufferers. Had time been permitted much more would have been done for these objects of charity, but they were sent on board by the representative of the company almost the moment they came across from Aspinwall. There is no doubt however, that Capt. Merry, of the steamer America, will do everything possible to soften the misery of the passengers who are now under his charge. The America sailed hence during the night of the 11th for San Juan del Sur, Nicaragua, and San Francisco.

[The latest accounts state that the Golden Rule was fast going to pieces, and the wreckers were busy at work.]

SANITARY COMMISSION.—Rev. J. H Chapin, agent U. S. Sanitary Commission, passed through town last Wednesday on his way to Yreka and vicinity. Mr. Chapin will be through here again one day next week, probably Wednesday, when he proposes to address the citizens in behalf of the Sanitary cause. Although the late war has been ended, the Sanitary Commission in all probability, will not be able to close its operations until this winter. The Christian Commission has been able to bring its operations to a termination from the fact that its principle work was on the battle-field, while the Sanitary Commission lay not so much on the battle field as in Hospitals, Soldiers Homes, Vegetable Supply Department, Hospital Directory, etc. The work of these departments are of scarcely less importance than at any previous portion of the great struggle.

CELEBRATION AT BYBEE'S GROVE.—We understand the celebration at the above named place was well attended and that all enjoyed themselves finely. Mr. Fay made a short speech and Mr. Langel read the Declaration of Independence in very good style.

In the evening the people of the town were treated to a fine display of fire works; and had the night been dark, the effect would have been brilliant.

Badger & Lindenberger, importers and wholesale dealers in drygoods and clothing, San Francisco, are reliable and liberal dealers, as some of our Jacksonville merchants can testify, who have dealt with the firm several years.

RETIRED.—J. Martin has withdrawn from the forge. He has sold his interest in the business, to D. C. Miller, and desires all to come forward and settle up, as he has some spare time, and can amuse himself receiving his old patrons and their "loose spondulix," as well as nailing on shoes.

CELEBRATION AT ROCK POINT.—We understand they had quite a fine celebration at Rock Point. Wm. Fiddler, Esq., of this place, delivered the oration.

From San Francisco papers, we learn that the Russian Telegraph Expedition will soon start from that port.

During the late session, Congress appropriated $817,000 to be expended in Oregon.

San Francisco, July 2d—Hon. Schuyler Colfax, Speaker of the last House of Representatives and a member of the new Congress, Lieutenant-Governor Boss, of Illinois, Mr. Richardson, of the New York Tribune and Mr. Bowles of the Springfield Republican, arrived in this city last night by the way of the plains. The party on their arrival in this city were received by Mayor Coon and a Committee of the Board of Supervisors and D. C. McRuer, A. A. Sargent and other distinguished citizens, and escorted to the Occidental Hotel, where the are now staying.

TO THE

WOOL GROWERS

OF OREGON

THE undersigned having on hand a number of superior, thorough-bred Spanish, or Vermont, Merino bucks, and a few French Merino bucks, consisting of lambs, yearlings and two year-olds, assumes this method of informing the public, that he is selling them very reasonably for cash. The Spanish or Vermont Merino are descended direct from the stock of Edwin Hammond, Vermont, and the French Merinos from stock imported into Oregon by Jones & Rockwell, of Vermont

An excellent opportunity is here offered for stock masters to improve their stock. The sheep can now be seen at the farm of the undersigned, on the North Umpqua River, at the "Winchester Ferry." Like venders of merchandise, naught is charged for exhibiting. THOMAS SMITH.
