The School Book Swindle.

L. J. Powell, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has taken the field, it seems, as a drummer for a certain class of text books for the public schools of Oregon. He is, we are informed, at present traveling over the State at the people's expense, under the pretense of holding Teacher's Institutes, but in reality exerting his influence and the influence of his position to secure the adoption of a certain class of books for which service men usually get paid by book publishers. We don't know that Mr. Powell does but suppose he is like the rest of the human family. He has published a circular and sent it out to the superintendents of the different counties who have this matter to decide, in which great injustice, we think, is done all the publishers except Appleton & Co., for whom Mr. Powell is said to be at work. In this circular the price is given of the series of different kinds of readers and spellers, but to make a good showing for his favorite company the price of the speller is omitted, yet the total price claims to be the price of all, the readers and spellers included. Again we are informed that the house of Appleton & Co. had information as to the offers of other houses, and bid so as to come under. Of course we don't pretend to say that this information was obtained through Mr. Powell, in fact we hardly think it was, but they got it.

The Harvey series of books are offered in this circular for $1 16, including five readers and a speller, and now since the "skulduggery" was discovered, the whole are offered for 70 cents, and we believe this to be decidedly the best and cheapest series of text books offered, and we do hope that County School Superintendents will not allow Mr. Powell or anyone else to control them in this matter, but will examine all and select from the list, having only in view quality and price.

Dancing.

"Give us something concerning dancing in your next," is the request which has been asked of us several times. Our opinion on dancing we will not at present relate, for it would not amount to a "skill of beans dosing down the Umatilla at high tide." Dancing would go on about the same anyway. We cannot comply with the request at the present. We would be in considerable danger of having our "bean catcher" pulled by our lady admirers were we to proceed. Most of them like to engage in saltatory exercises, generally given in preference to the round dance, because as one told us not long ago "it is so heavenly." Just where the heavenly part comes, is not very clear to us—we can't see the point. Allow your arm to circle the delicate waste of a fair one in the hall room, and undertake the same in the walk home—not much, no sir! yor entirely too forward, your asms' out o place! But while we shall not at present give our views on the main points involved in this social question, we will touch a little on a side issue. Whether it is right or not to dance, we do not undertake to say; but it certainly is very injudicious and improper for school girls and boys to go to balls during term time. Let a young miss, for example, go to a high-school dance 'till 2 or 3 o'clock in the "we sma' hrs" of the morning, and then wade home, in mud and rain, with thin shoes and thinner ball dress, and she is very apt to "catch a cold" which will result in a spell of sickness of greater or less duration, and whether this result follows or not, she is in no condition to study or recite her lessons. She is sleepy, and tired; and instead of thinking of her lessons she thinks of some one or more of her admirers. Instead of solving some problem in mathematics, she tries to cypher out how many dimples her Adonis has in his cheeks and chin, or how many manly sprouts he has in his moustache, or whether his breath—which she inhaled while whirling with him in a polka—is composed of tobbacco, or decayed teeth, or Stilton cheese, or brandy cocktails, or whether it is not a compound of all these delightful ingredients. And the young sprout of the other gender is in but little better condition. He cannot study—he cannot recite. He is indulging in idle thoughts of her; he is trying to write some doggerel to his charmer's eyebrow, or wondering when he will again be permitted to engage in the "innocent pastime of dancing" with his Houda. We repeat: We think it very injurious and improper for school girls and school boys to attend balls while attending school. As for the main point—whether dancing is right or wrong—we say nothing at present. Chacun a son gout—chacun tire de son cote.

Strange but true, the Independent has something to "talk about." Not exactly the editor, but a "rambling balderdash writer" who tries in every line to insinuate that "HE is the writer of this piece," and australizes at us as if he expected to be placed, through the columns of this paper, at the head of the rank of newspaper writers, and give him the credit of being the only one who has discovered that our two and a quarter column, on our trip to Grand Ronde Valley, to be a reconstruction of the Anglo-Saxon language. Our Anglo-mania friend has no doubt struck some way by which he can advertise himself and gain a little notoriety, but we will not expose to public his ignorance upon this occasion, or who the writer is, although before now he has become notional among his acquaintances. If it was Tustin's production we would not think strange of it, as it is nothing surprising to read such from him. His writer says we have excited his admiration; well—well—well; excited his admiration. Most persons of this character are watched pretty close when roaming over the country for fear their admiration may become somewhat mingled with other peoples business—nothing new, though, for him. He also shoots his bosso at our Senior, who we will leave to defend his own case, and if he chooses him of no importance—which would be right—we will not complain. Our advice to this agent—pardon us—but to this middle-aged man, is to apply immediately to some well regulated counting room and secure the influence of some "noted paper" to "boost" him into a position where jealously would bother him not. "A spouting whale shoots a large stream and then quickly dives beneath the waters to allow the drops to splash gently back upon the bosom of the sea from whence they originally came." Thus it is with this "sprit" who is trying to gain a little notoriety through the columns of the Independent. The Junior of this paper seems to trouble this mania friend of ours considerably, perhaps we attempted to charge him a little too much for some printing which he wanted done, and he's "huffy" about it—that's what ails him exactly! He hopes for a key to our article, in last issue. It runs by the same key by which it was written. "Consistency," after this when you write an article for the press, read it over a few more times, and secure the opinion of some one else than the person whom you read it to last Sunday; be sure and read it in secret; be "careful and try to expose your insluuating smartnes," in a different light, "for 'tis a scarce article"—in your opinion. Tel est notre plaisir.

From "The Old Philosopher."

SALLY WINNEMUCCA

To the front. Come to the rescue of your dusky brethren, lest the whites of this section annihilate them, as well as cut off the flower of the U. S. Army, in the bloom of his youth. The people of Umatilla county are a set of "scalawags" who propose to disregard all honor and decency, and outrage the laws of the land. Secret societies exist in our midst for the purpose of slaying Indians when opportunity offers, and if need be decimate the U. S. Army. All this according to the telegram of General Howard to Governor Thayer. Now we scout the idea that any respectable citizens of this county propose to do aught to injure poor Lo! nor do I know of any one who desires the regular army to be curtailed by violence unless it be my democratic friend Brig. Gen. Turner, who may then march at the head of our State Militia. But I am glad to see that Turner has refuted the falsehoods in Howard's telegram, and boldly exposed the cause of his neighbors and coutitizens. We want our government officials as well as all the people of the Union to know and understand that the people of Umatilla county are a peaceable and law abiding class, and possess as much intelligence and civilization as is usually found in frontier settlements. Gen. Howard is fond of writing letters. He likes to see his name in print, and I have in my minds' eye a young Lieutenant who, in this regard, very much resembles his superior officer. The appearance of General Howard's telegram in the Daily Oregonian of the 11th, created a great sensation in our midst. We feel that we have been grossly slandered and falsely accused. We demand that justice shall be done us. If such a "reign of terror" exists as the General claims, no respectable citizen will fail to do his utmost in bringing offenders to justice. But we insist that all should not be judged by a few, and we are glad to note that our worthy Governor does not "swallow" all that the General says, but appears to realize and appreciate the situation of affairs. The chiefs of the tribes on our Reservation have returned from their visit to the Great Father at Washington. They were very much impressed with all they saw on their trip across the continent, but are reticent about their intentions in regard to remaining on or leaving their present reserve. A grand pow-pow will be held in a few days, when definite action will probably be taken. My plenipotentiary the majority of the tribes will decide to favor us with the pleasure of their company for many years to come. Let those who have for years been waiting for a "soft thing" and have had their eye on some choice reservation land, where large crops could be raised with little effort, now hold themselves, and labor in pastures new. There is an abundance of good land in this neighborhood awaiting the industrious husbandman.

THE EDITOR IN CHIEF

Of this paper has gone to Albany to attend the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows. An odd fellow our Jim is, and when he returns we doubt he will keep secrets about all he saw and learned in his travels. Meanwhile we hope he will not be accused of being an Odd PHYLOSOPHER. We trust Turner will succeed in procuring a Hoe press, so that in the near future we may be spared the infliction of "patent outsides," which contain principally stale telegrams. Almost everybody here gets the news fresh from the Portland Oregonian. A few of our citizens take the paper and nearly all the others borrow it.

The weather still continues mixed, and sheep men are disgusted. Jupiter Pluvious has been more than kind to us, but we trust he will now "let up." The races at the reservation attract large crowds every Sunday. Last Sunday the boys got rather wet on the outside, and resorted the sprits to keep dry on the inside. However too frequent imbibing affected their eyesight, and they could not distinguish the dusky Indian from the pale face, and the result was that whisky was scattered promiscuously, and a number of Indians got "scattered." Maj Carpenter says the boys must leave their flasks behind them or not come at all.

A DAILY STAGE LINE

To Umatilla is much needed. The O S N Co's boats now group and down the river with full loads. They do not wait for the stages, and stage passengers are often annoyed by being too late, and being compelled to lay over a day or two in Umatilla. Beecher may well say that there is no hell in the future state, for anyone who has endured a day's stay in Umatilla has had his hell on earth. Passengers by to-days stage report that a telegram was received at Umatilla stating that a great fire was raging at Dalles city, but no particulars could be learned. By the way the EAST OREGONIAN had a narrow escape from fire a few days since. What has become of the fire department? If sufficient funds cannot be raised to buy an engine, hose cart, etc., why not organize a Bucket Brigade. Too much reliance must not be placed in engines, etc. It is the first bucket of water that often "tells the tale." Yours truly,

THE OLD PHILOSOPHER.

Since my last, which by the way reached you too late for your issue of the 24th—and has probably ere this found its way to the waste basket—full particulars of the great fire at The Dalles have been received. Almost the entire business portion of the town was destroyed. This will prove a serious blow to one of the most progressive towns in the State; but the citizens nothing daunted, will again go to work vigorously, and restore what the fire fiend has mercilessly destroyed, and soon we may expect to see "The Dalles" arise phoenix like from its ashes. The last sentence, MR. EDITOR, is original. I do not think any of your readers ever saw it in print before. The fire at The Dalles has again demonstrated the fact that modern brick edifices instead of resisting the flames, are "licked up" like so much tinder. The old style stone or brick houses with iron doors and shutters, and entirely devoid of wooden ornaments alone appear to withstand the fury of the enemy. Brick buildings of the present day, as a rule, are hardly entitled to the name, and the fancy wooden filagree ornaments, cornices, etc., French plate doors and windows, make them no more secure against fire than a wooden shanty.

EVERYTHING HAS BEEN QUIET ON THE UMATILLA

During the past week. The clerk of the weather alone continues to raise a rumpus. An hour ago "Old Sol" was shining forth resplendently. Now he has vanished temporarily, and the thunders roll and the lightnings flash and the winds play smash. (More originality.) "Baby Phil." made his appearance again in last week's issue of the Independent). He says I (he thinks it's Jim) did not think of referring to wool matters and the Umatilla Reservation affairs until the Independent had first called attention thereto. Go slow my youthful friend. Bear in mind I do not use the Independent as a guide. Besides you will remember I referred to the Independent's clippings from the Portland Oregonian. Another thing please keep in view that Tustin did not bring forth his Philosopher until after Turner's had become quite an old one.

Some time ago I called attention to our boys. Most of the youngsters here smoke; some for corns, others because their parents fancy it will prevent diphtheria; others again out of "pure cussedness." Smoking is injurious enough to these youngsters, but what do you think of their possessing themselves of a bottle of whisky, retiring to a barn and having a high old time. I venture to say the little fellows who "imulged" have learned a lesson they will not soon forget. They no doubt realize that "It is Heaven to get drunk, but Hell to get sober." There has been but little

RAILROAD TALK

Lately. We are all patiently awaiting developments. Trade and traffic are remarkably dull in our town just now, and our merchants complain that "change" is as scarce as at any time during the winter. This thing of winter lingering so long in the lap of spring is becoming monotonous. The young brother summer ought to come along and boot him out. A number of new buildings are in contemplation, but the present condition of the roads causes a scarcity of lumber and our mechanics must sit idly by.

Mrs. Annetta Peckam, a temperance lecturer from California, favored our people with a lecture a few evenings since. Considering the state of the weather a fair audience was present, but "old topers" and the male sex in general whom the lecture was intended to reach were conspicuous by their absence. Those who heard the lecture praise it highly. Our friend Doctor Ashford left us on Monday last for a new field of duty. "Doc," likes Pendleton and all Pendleton likes "Doc," but an assured practice and good salary was a temptation not easily resisted. We wish the Doctor abundant success in his new home—way off in Eastern Washington.

Consistency thou art a jewel! or something to that effect Shakespear wrote. The Independent of Thursday last has something to say on that subject which is a "winner." I fear, friend Jim, you were a little "tuf" when you wrote that article on Howard's telegram. In wading off the blow of an enemy, be careful never to open for him a point of attack. Yours truly,

THE OLD PHILOSOPHER.

MAY 14, 1879.

ED. "E. O."—To-night is one of those dark, dismal, rainy ones, following a long dreary storm that we seldom witness in Eastern Oregon.

Weather-bound with us are a half dozen miners on their way to the Monumental gold and silver mines, whose reports are very flattering, they bidding fair to be the Eldorado of the West. From eight tons of the silver quartz sent to San Francisco they realized $500 per ton. They are on Granite creek, Grant county, 60 miles from this place, via a new road now being built, over which they will soon pack their new quartz mill which now lies in Portland ready for the mines, which will be in crushing order by September 1st. The works are in the hands of C. S. Miller as General Superintendent and manager in chief, an old miner of wide experience. J. W. Stemme, of Portland, is the company's president. The Beagle Boss have opened a gold mine only a mile below, and from three tons quartz realized $1,500 in gold.

Already the enquiry is often made, "What is Eastern Oregon, is our bunch grass fast fading away under the iron heel of the ruthless herds that are scattered over the country?" But the mineral wealth has come to our rescue. Gold, silver and coal have been found in large quantities, and the loss of bunch grass is no longer troubling the minds of the Eastern Oregonians.

Another case of injury from riding the untamed steed is among us. A personage known as "Dutch Frank," was thrown from his horse receiving a fracture and dislocation of one of the cervical vertebrae, at least such is the report, a very severe injury I should judge. XXX.

Jay Gould and Oregon Railroads

The arrival of Mr. Villard, President of the Oregon & California Railroad, and the report that he is backed by large capital for the purpose of constructing the connecting link of railroad from this city to Boise, has put in circulation all kinds of conjectures. The report, which is pretty well authenticated, comes to us that Jay Gould has bought the controlling interest in the West side and the Oregon & California Railroad, including steamships running between this port and San Francisco, and having a controlling interest in the Pacific Mail Company from Panama to San Francisco already gives him a through connection with Oregon by water. He is pushing his narrow gauge road west to the Columbia river as fast as possible, which will give him an overland through route. The bed for his narrow gauge is made for a standard track, but in order to cheapen transportation, the temporary rails for a narrow gauge are being used, which will be removed as soon as the through connection is made and the standard gauge put down. To check Gould's plan for controlling the transportation business of this Northwest Coast, which will include the entire Chinese trade when once established, the Central Pacific is determined to push their road by way of Winnemucca to Eugene and there connect with the projected road of which B. J. Pengra is President. There is hardly a doubt but that Mr. Pengra's movements are in the interest of the Central Pacific, and that Company will be forced to come down the valley on an independent line, as both the other roads now running through the valley are beyond their control. The Central Pacific has been resting easy on this subject, believing it could buy out the German bondholders whenever it saw fit, and has allowed the golden opportunity to slip through its hands. The next thing for that company to do in order to protect itself, is to try to head off this New York railroad king and come into our State before he can complete his road. With the steamships in conjunction with his roads, the Central Pacific can readily see that he has a decided advantage over them. It will not take long to make the connection between this city and Ogden by way of the Columbia, and we shall expect to see a strong effort made by both parties to see which can first make the through connection and get control of the trade. Jay Gould, as we understand the matter, controls the management of the Union Pacific, and his object now undoubtedly is to cut loose from the Central Pacific and strike for the Pacific Coast by the way of the Columbia. We believe this explains the activity in railroad movements at present, and there is hardly any doubt in our mind of its truthfulness. The Northern Pacific, noticing these two roads making such determined efforts to control our trade, is equally determined to push forward its road, and we think that instead of the people being forced to pay for railroad building in Oregon, capital and the interests of the different companies will push the matter to a speedy completion. Oregon is no longer an infant to the commerce of this nation, and capitalists note her great future importance, and we shall see an era of railroad building for the next two years heretofore only equaled when the Central and Union Pacific were building across the continent.—Standard.

Moses and His Reservation.

The reservation set apart for Moses which he objects to:—

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
April 19th 1879.

It is hereby ordered that the tract of country in Washington Territory, lying within the following described boundaries, viz:

Commencing at the intersection of the forty-mile limits of the branch line of the Northern Pacific railroad with the Okanagan river; thence up said river to the boundary line between the United States and British Columbia; thence west on said boundary line to the forty-forth degree of longitude west from Washington; thence south on said degree of longitude to its intersection with the forty-mile limits of the branch line of the Northern Pacific railroad; and thence with the line of the said forty-mile limits to the place of beginning, be, and the same is hereby, withdrawn from sale and is set apart as a reservation for the permanent use and occupancy of Chief Moses and his people, and such other friendly Indians as may elect to settle thereon with his consent and that of the Secretary of the Interior. R. B. HAYS.

Correspondence.

ED. "E. O."—In reading your article headed contemptible, the following thoughts struck me:—What has become of the dignity of the head of our government? What can men of sense think? Who knows both sides of this Indian question? Are there any white women on this coast who would embrace Moses or any other Indian chief? No! Our women know the true Indian character too well, to their sorrow; while madam Hayes does not, and does not want to know; if she does let her ask Mr. Slater, our representative. They at Washington want to keep up the present Indian policy. And of course we of this northwest coast are nothing but ghouls or land pirates run out of all the States of the Union and killing those poor, simple children of the forest. God save the mark. If Mrs. H. A Co. had been here last summer and seen what the people of our county had to suffer—men, women and children flying from their homes, leaving everything behind, to get away from the merciless, so-called friendly Indians, forced to look upon the mutilated remains of our best citizens shot down, some of them by Indians that they had fed and sheltered. Look at the sad picture of poor Lamar, after being shot at the Willow Springs fight, when our gallant volunteers was forced to retreat and leave their dead contadies on the field. Their ruthless enemy mutilated and burned the dead on the spot where poor Lamar fell. His loving comrades returned to find all that was left of him that died for us, a charred mass; his heart still entire, with a knife sticking in it. Mr. Editor, you saw that and most all of the citizens of Pendleton, when his remains was laid out at the Good Templar's Hall awaiting interment. Now if Hayes & Co. don't believe this, I say again, ask Mr. Slater. Oh! they want the lands of these Indians, and to get them, these land grabbers shot at unarmed Indians. Mr. Editor, I have read these letters to General Howard. I consider the matter a perfect farce. I would have the head of our government, and our military department commander, pause and think for a moment who and what kind of men are the sufferers where this Indian trouble exists. In the first place were we, the citizens of Umatilla county, injured or not last summer by Indians? We must have only dreamed it. No, indeed, it was a fearful live ordeal. I leave it to the world to judge, did we seek revenge? No! We took to our government for redress. Suppose Illinois Jim was shot on the prairie, would any reasonable person lay the blame on the citizens of Umatilla county. We can't be responsible for such an act as that. I don't believe it was done by any citizen of Umatilla county.

The shooting at Flint Rock was deplored by all the citizens of Umatilla county.

Some of the Pendleton men told Farrow that the law was in their own hands. Linn Farrow, give us the names of any citizens of Pendleton who said so. He also reports that a secret organization exists for the purpose of killing Indians at all times. Pray tell be the Masons or Odd Fellows. Oh! I have got it! it is the Knights of Pythias, that is what they were getting G. W. Webb last summer to make—the sports had shorled for the above named societies—the only secret organizations in Umatilla county. So I think the authorities ought to go for them. The Great Father at Washington presented our chiefs with a watch, and the latter improved title. That is the best thing he ever done in his life in the first place, the good book says, "He that lives by the sword shall die by the sword." Mark that again, the watch is symbolical to these chiefs, of the rapid flight of the time when they shall give place and retreat far up to the pale face warrior from the rising sun, there hunting lands of theirs, only fulfilling their destiny.

The Standard's Position.

The Portland Standard copies our editorial article on the Howard and Farrow quarrel, and says:—

It has been but a short time since we published a dispatch from Gen. O. O. Howard in reference to the situation at Pendleton, in which he stated that he had been informed by Lieut. Farrow that a secret organization existed to murder Indians, friendly or otherwise, etc. Gen. Howard in all probability accepted the information from his officer as we did the dispatch from him, as being true in detail and particulars, and if the reports were unfounded Lieut. Farrow is the one upon to blame. Gen. Howard might have acted hastily or taken too much for granted, yet he has confidence in his officers the same as the editors of the EAST OREGONIAN who censure the action of Howard, the Standard and Oregonian of this city, have in such other. It is not the province of the Standard to unjustly lay blame upon the people of Umatilla county or any other section of the State. The dispatch came to us from the head of the Department of Columbia and was accepted as true in every particular and given publication. Our remarks only reflected the substance of the dispatch just the same as dozens of other which appear in our columns.

Murderer Arrested

Last week Deputy Sheriff Halsey of Wasco county arrested an Indian supposed to be one of the murderers of Mr Charles Jewell, killed in this county last July, in the early outbreak of the Indian war last year. Sheriff Sperry arrived with the murderer from the Dalles last Wednesday, and he now languishes in our county jail.
