Editorial Troubles.

If an editor omits anything he is lazy; if he speaks of anything as it is he is mad; if he smooths down the rough places he is bribed; if he calls things by their proper names, he is unfit for the position of editor; if he does not furnish his readers with jokes he is stupid; if he does, he is a rattle head, lack of stability; if he condemns the wrong he is a good fellow, but lacks discretion; if he lets wrong go unmentioned, he is a coward; if he indulges in personalities he is a blackguard; if he does not he is insipid. In short, if he edits a paper properly, and sticks to truth and facts, he is a fool, and doesn't know how to edit a paper half as well as his readers could.

PARIS LETTER.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, FRANCE, Nov. 23d 1880.

The vexed question of France and Germany disagreement is quieted by M. de Girardin in an extraordinary [illegible] this evening France [illegible] merc[illegible]

[illegible] is be[illegible] [illegible]sting cir[illegible] [illegible]n suggested [illegible] of her territory [illegible] Rhine, to form an [illegible] a sort of Rhenish Bel[illegible] could act as a neutral barrier between France and Germany. The existence of this State, if guaranteed by Europe, would allow of the two countries disarming, and what Germany lost in territory she would gain in peace and prosperity. All the European Governments would be greateful for the innovation, and Europe would thus cease to be a huge camp. M. de Girardin concludes: "Here would be an issue to a policy which has none. But this issue, the opening which depends on Prince Bismarck, will not be opened, and he will have no excuse for not doing so; for the issue has been candidly pointed to him." It will be remembered that, in the preface to the "Supplice d une Femme," M. Emile de Girardin, the Nestor of French journalists, boasted that a new and original idea came to him every day. Of all the ideas with which he has filled a goodly number of volumes, not the least original is that of suggesting to Germany that she shall voluntarily cede a portion of her territory in order to avoid a war.

A diverting story, humorously illustrative of Prince Jerome Bonaparte's proverbial thriftiness, has recently gone the round of the Parisian newspapers. It appears that during the latter part of his cousin's reign, the Prince became dissatisfied with his boot maker, and formally withdrew his custom from that artist, who continued, nevertheless, to ornament the front of his shop with the attractive inscription, "Purveyor to his Imperial Highness the Prince Napoleon." Noticing this delusive announcement one day, as he drove past the shop, Prince Jerome sent a member of his household to the boot maker with positive orders that the inscription should be forthwith removed. As, however, he subsequently found that his commands had been disregarded, he took legal proceedings against the boot make for unlawful and mendacious advertisements of his (the Prince's) patronage. The defendant's counsel, in the course of his pleadings, endeavored in the following ingenious manner to show why his client should not be compelled to withdraw the offending inscription, arguing that such a decision on the part of the Court would infallibly result in serious prejudice and loss to the boot maker. "For," he observed, "hitherto passers-by whose attention was attracted by the announcement in question stopped, entered the shop, and bought boots freely of my client. And why did they do so? Because they had already said to themselves 'Prince Napoleon's boot maker! That must be a good workman, and an uncommonly cheap one into the bargain. We will give him a trial.' If you force him to remove his inscription, the peripatetic public will certainly infer that he must have raised his prices, and will hurry past his shop with averted eyes." The boot maker, it need scarcely be added, was cast, but one cannot help regretting that so humorous a plea should have been disallowed by a French tribunal.

A Christmas Story.

It was Christmas eve.

Streets—brilliantly lit shop windows—toys—gay crowds—snow on the frozen ground—everybody out—Christmas turkey.

Jane Allalone wandered about alone—crowd—sweet, sad face—wistful eyes.

Five years before, James Goody-goody—Christmas eve—betrothed to Jane—sailed away—India—ship lost—never heard of—foundered on coast of Africa.

Jane—held on to hope—never would marry—pined away, etc.

William Badybady—rich, corrupt, dissipation—mortgage on Jane's mother's house—foreclosure.

—way, villian! Rather poverty, crust, &c.

Turned out of doors—homeless.

Down by the dark river, Pier No. 8. She was about to take the fatal plunge. In fact, Jane Allalone did. But just then the ship with James Goodygoody, which had not been lost at all, came sailing up to the dock, loaded to the water's edge with chias, silk dresses and tea. Captain Goodygoody saw Jane struggling in the river. He fished her out with a boat-hook, and hauled her on board.

"My Jane!"

"My James!"

POPULAR SCIENCE NOTES

The view taken by Professor Adhemar, that continents have not been depressed, but overflowed by the ocean is generally accepted by some of the most eminent Scientists of the present day. The theory is that, owing to the precession of the equinoxes, the mass of water is transferred from one hemisphere to the other, and the sun remains eight days longer in one hemisphere than the other. The time required for the transfer of water from one hemisphere to the other is estimated at about ten thousand years, during which time a steady change of climate is gradually taking place all over the globe. The extreme of cold was reached at the Atlantic Pole, about six hundred years ago, since which time the climate has been becoming milder, while north of the Equator it has been growing colder. The theory of some scientists that the north pole region was at one time a tropical climate, if it could be believed, would seem to strengthen the belief of [illegible] and his scientific followers.

Daniel Ruggles, of Fort[illegible] has obtained a patent for [illegible] elevating rainfalls by [illegible] The idea is certainly [illegible] ing from the sw[illegible] heavy cannons [illegible] by a fall of r[illegible] climates' [illegible] small [illegible] explosive [illegible] electricity. [illegible] cloud region [illegible] ions will, the [illegible] the clear monday [illegible] clouds and bring down [illegible] ing.

A gen[illegible] ggestion is made by a San [illegible] ge gentleman, as a means of precuring [illegible] d certainly, and to prevent the [illegible] tent practice of repeating at elections, and of fraudulent registration. It is that of photographing each voter, and on the back of each portrait to write so much of the individual's history as relates to his birth, naturalization, etc. The cost would be no greater than the present system of registration. Voters could be arranged alphabetically and when a vote has been deposited, the voter's photograph can be taken down numbered to correspond with the number on his ticket, and laid away in a box prepared for that purpose.

A man subscribing himself as "A Common Sense Engineer," writes the Scientific American, in a lengthy communication proposing a plan by which he holds it possible to transport freight and passengers by rail from New York to San Francisco, a distance of some 3000 miles in ten hours. His plan is to divide the distance into thirty parts, with stations at every 100 miles. The track which is movable is divided into sections and is put into and continued in rapid motion by stationary engines at each station. Thus a locomotive under a full head of steam on the rapidly moving track is carried forward at lightening speed, while the wear and tear of machinery is no greater than upon other railways. The writer fails to tell us what the passengers and freight would be good for when delivered at the end of their journey.

Parties engaged in the excavations commenced a short time ago at Villagrande, (Sardinia) report the discovery of some remarkable instruments, if as believed by competent persons, they belong to the bronze epoch. Among these instruments are two bronze saws and a four-pronged fork, said to have been found in the same repository. In some new excavations opened in the vicinity of the former ones, near Ferante, there have also been recently discovered, not far from the surface of the ground several ancient tombs of unique and peculiar structure. In one of these were found twenty-two skeletons in various positions. The tombs are all dug in the rocks and covered over with slabs of stone.

The Statue of Joan of Arc, whose history, many or our readers are familiar with, as being the glorious peasant girl who became so famous in France, during the reign of King Charles VII, was recently erected at Compiegne, France, with a grand ceremony. The statute is the handiwork of the celebrated sculptor, M. Lemoux, and is said to be one of the finest pieces of workmanship of its kind in all Europe.

While workmen were excavating recently near Bath, England, a most important discovery was made in the shape of perfect Roman bath, measuring some forty feet in length and eight feet in width. The discovery was made at a depth of some thirty feet below the surface. The bath is quite deep and is lined with lead three quarters of an inch in thickness.

FRANKLIN'S STATION, Dec. 14 1880.

EDITOR E. O.—The beautiful Spring weather that we are now enjoying in this section of Umatilla county is truly delightful. At the commencement of our recent cold snap the snow fell about three inches deep. On December 6th we were favored with the inalienable Chinook wind, which caused the "beautiful snow" to disappear in double quick time, and now we are still enjoying a continuance of warm breezes, interspersed with warm sunshine and showers, the hills around us are putting on the "mantle of green" and all nature seems to review its comely attitude of spring, and all seems happy as the marriage bells.

Speaking of marriage vows I am reminded of another, and none the less happy event of the day, in which our worthy and esteemed friend Harry Crawford is slightly and personally responsible as the following hymeneal notice indicates:

Married, Dec. 14, 1880, at the residence of Mr. J. C. Franklin, on Little Butter Creek, by A. Mallory, J. P., Mr. Harry E. Crawford and Miss Dora Green, both of Umatilla county.

Thusly we glide along, but Mrs. F. says the next time she adopts a young lady in her family she is determined that the encumbrance known as old bach's must keep at a respectful distance from her, and we may say her broom-stick as anything; so Mr. Editor take heed and beware. We pity your condition, yet so long as there is life, there is hope. J. C. F

I must add that I am not aware that the E. O. is yet making its regular appearance at Pendleton as I have not seen a copy of it for many days; cause unknown to this department, and further despondent sayeth not. Truly your friend,

J. C. FRANKLIN.

Mr. Cox, the editor of this paper, was called to Umatilla on lega' business last Tuesday and left me to write up the locals for this week, hence the dearth of locals. I have a good mind to whoop up the Woman Suffrage business a little while I have a chance but guess I had better not.

Four years and a few months ago, Judge Davenport of Montana Territory purchased 1000 ewes at a cost of $3,000 and put them in the charge of a young man who was to take them to a range and take all the care of them and pay the entire expense of the band for four years, receiving for his share one half of the wool produced and one half of the increase of the flock. When the settlement was recently made, Judge Davenport received for his share of the proceeds of the wool $1500 and for his share of the increase $3000. The profit on the investment at $3000 for four years was [illegible] per cent per annum, and [illegible] was given a good start in [illegible] e proves very conclu[illegible] business plays, especially in that Territory.

From a Virginia exchange we learn that the legislature of that State recently granted a charter for the incorporation of a company to be known as the "Virginia Oregon Company." The capital of the association is placed at $2,000,000 of which amount $1,300,000 is said to have been subscribed. According to its charter the company is permitted to hold in fee 200,000 acres of land, to issue bonds, but not without the consent of nine-tenths of all the stockholders. A contract has been made with California parties to transfer their stock of thoroughbred Angoras to Virginia and to furnish also 20,000 ewe goats of original Mildose stock to be purchased in and brought from Mexico. About $20,000 will be expended in making the transfer and improvements.—States Rights Democrat.

We learn that Willie Palmer, who disappeared from Willow creek rather mysteriously a few years ago, has turned up all right. It seems that the boy ran away from home and wended his way to the Willamette valley, where he has been living alone, until last week, when he returned to Willow creek none the worse for his experience. A long and thorough search was made for him at the time of his disappearance, considerable excitement was occasioned by several vagrte rumors in connection with the affair. His father and mother are now living in Eastern Oregon, no doubt still oblivious of the whereabouts of their son.—Jacksonville Times.

On Wednesday morning Mr. S. H. Spencer, residing about six miles below town, shot and killed a horse belonging to Mr. Samuel Meek. It seems that meek, who is road supervisor in that district, ordered the teams to go through Spencer's fence for gravel. Spencer warned him to keep out, but in spite of the warning, a team drove through, when Spencer shot killing the horse. Mr Meek came to town and procured from Justice Foch a warrant for the arrest of Spencer, but when the Sheriff served the warrant Mr. Spencer was too sick to come. And thus the trouble remains.—Jacksonville Times.

Once upon a time a mule, without having received an invitation, attended a convention of animals that was called for the purpose of discussing the best methods of family government. "What do you know about all this?" asked the President tenderly; "have you ever raised any children?" The mule wept. "Ah, no," she said, "I have never raised anything but full grown men; but, land of the pilgrim! you should see how I raised them—you should see me take a man that weighs as much as David Davis." Upon a rising vote the mule was immediately elected to social secretary, with power to send for persons and papers.

Mr. Adams, a well known hunter, captured a white beaver on the head of Skookum Chuck river, over on the Sound. This is the second he has killed, the Olympia Tribune says.

FROM THE CAPITOL.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON D. C., Dec. 6th 1880.

There are not wanting indications that old troubles in the Republican party will break out again during the last few months of this administration or early in that of President Garfield. A skillful and experienced politician like Garfield can do much to suppress them if not begun. But no one can tell which he will think it his duty to do—when he becomes President. For the present he declines to interfere, even in his own State. In that State, in New York, and in Maine, are the liveliest promises of quarrels within the party.

An unusually large number of Congressmen assembled to-day for the opening of the session. It is eminent belief that but little attention will be paid to party politics during the session. No elections of importance are to take place for a year, a new administration is soon to come into power from which a reasonable degree of conservatism may at least be hoped for, and, besides, there was political excitement enough in the late campaign to satisfy people for awhile. Most Senators and Representatives talk of a business session.

The appropriation bills will, of course, be passed. There will be a determined effort to change our military pension system. A refunding bill, to cover about eight millions of dollars in bonds soon becoming redemable will be urged. Subsidiary schemes for American lines of steamers will be numerous. Many influential Congressmen will ask for the passage of a measure looking to a revision of the tariff. A re-apportionment bill based on the census of 1880 will be introduced early. These will furnish ample opportunities for hard work in Committee, and eloquence on the floor, of the two Houses, so that partisan debates will not be necessary as a means of passing away the time.

Mr. Hayes' message to Congress to-day is a long document, largely made up of congratulations upon a more or less real improvement in our condition as a people, and upon a wholly imaginary reform in our civil service. Despite extraordinary precautions the message was given to the public before, it reached the presiding officers of the two Houses of Congress. There is quite a general belief that some of the recommendations as to legislators were suggested by President-elect Garfield during his late visit to this city.

The only Republican paper in the city—the National Republican—appears this morning much improved in appearance and under new Editorial and business control. The names of its managers will be announced in a few days. It is as Radical as before and calls loudly upon General Garfield to "be a party President." I have many reasons for believing that he will do so.

Railroad building is booming in this State at the present time.

The Portland Bulletin has made a partial change of hands again.

Wm. Bybee of Jackson county has sent in the past 20 years 20,000 fatted hogs to the California market.

The tea crop of India this year is estimated at 70,000,000 pounds, nearly double the yield of 1878.

Col. J. N. T. Miller has manufactured about 1,800 gallons of superior wine this season.

A compositor, setting up the toast: "Woman—without her, man would be a savage," got the punctuation in wrong and made it read: "Woman—without her man, would be a savage."

Captain Paine's Oklahoma scheme is likely to result in much trouble even to quell it now. It is estimated that 25,000 persons are across the Indian Territory line.

Andrew Berger, a pauper, died last Sunday near Springfield. He had trusted his children with his property, and in return was thrust out upon the charity of the cold world.

A terrible fire visited Dayton on the night of the 13th inst. whereby a loss of over $35,000 resulted. By hard work the destruction of the entire town was averted.

A marriage license was returned to the County Clerk at Ottawa, Iowa, with a request that the fee paid for it be sent back as the girl had eloped with another fellow.

The Astorian says there are 16,000 cases of Salmon at Point Ross, 20,000 at Clifton, and at other points about 25,000 cases yet to ship.

A dull old lady, being told that a certain lawyer was lying at the point of death, exclaimed: "My gracious! Won't even death stop that man from lying?"

In an Ohio breach of promise suit, the man was proven so mean that the jury awarded no damages for escaping such a monster.

A woman in Marshal county, Kan., who is enjoying her fifth husband, lost her first two by hanging, a third was sent to the Penitentiary, and the fourth committed suicide.

Paterson Dunn stabbed and mortally wounded C. A. McCartney at Dayton, on the 18th inst. McCartney died on the following Monday and Dunn was put under $2,000 bonds.

There is a young man in Walla Walla only 19 years of age but who has attained the height of 7 feet 4 inches. He looks strong and healthy and is very quiet mannered and modest, and withal a perfect gentleman.

The potlach on Gormes island was attended by 3500 Indians and about 250 canoes. The practices indulged at these gatherings are demoralizing in the extreme and should be discountenanced by those in charge of the Indians.

Oregon has been requested to contribute a stone towards erecting the monument to George Washington at Washington, D. C. Twenty-nine States and Territories have made such contributions.

An old bachelor named J. C. Reed, residing on John Day's farm about one and one-half miles East of Jacksonville, fell in to the fireplace Wednesday morning while engaged in cooking his breakfast. He is subject to epileptic fits and was taken with a fit while standing over the fire falling into it burning his left hip and side in a terrible manner. He has been taken charge of by the county. It is thought that he will recover.

The Covert arson trial consumed 17 days time in the state circuit court that closed its regular session in Jacksonville last week. The cost of this trial to Jackson county was $2700. The jury after a deliberation of 23 hours failed to agree and were discharged. The case was remanded at a special session of the Court last Thursday.

There are now forty vessels in San Francisco loading with grain, and twenty more are daily expected. Last month fifty odd wheat laden ships sailed from that port for Europe, being the largest number within the same space of time for many years.

One million, one hundred and eleven thousand logs were accepted in Chicago during November, the largest receipts ever known for a month, with a value of $12,250,000. The clearing at the Chicago clearing house for November where $182,000,000, the largest ever recorded.

Philomath has increased materially in the last two years, and a number of houses are in course of construction. She has a college that she may well be proud of, as well as a district school that is under excellent management. Taken all in all, Philomath is in a very prosperous condition.

President Hayes has pardoned Daniel Smith, who has been confined in the Penitentiary of this State for some years. Smith was convicted of robbing the U. S. mails, and sentenced by Judge Deady for a period of eight years. He has served out five years of the term.

Congress is grinding away, but the chief matter of importance now engrossing the attention of the House seems to be the method of counting the electoral vote. This will not cut any particular figure in the coming event, but it may be well enough to fix it up by the time we come again.

On December 8th arrangements were perfected in Portland for continuing the mail service between that point and The Dalles during the blockade. The contract was awarded to Capt. John Harlow, who is to carry all U. S. mail except registered matter and is to receive $250 for each round trip. The mail will be brought over the mountains three times a week on pack horses.

The Republican leaders in Maine, with a few exceptions have given up the idea of counting out Gen. Plaisted, and decided to follow out the spirit of the doctrines laid down by the Supreme Court last Winter, although the strict letter of the law might not require such action. There has been much talk and speculation about the matter.

As there is no worldly gain without some loss, so there is no worldly loss without some gain. If you have lost wealth you have lost some trouble with it; if you have been lowered from a post of honor you have been likewise freed from the stroke of envy; and if sickness has blurred your beauty it has also delivered you from pride. Set the allowance against the loss and you will find no loss great. He loses little who possesses himself.

Justice Smith said, on opening his court at Connersville, Tenn.: "William Henry Smith is arraigned for assaulting his father." The magistrate had, on the previous day, knocked his father down with a club, and it was himself that he was now arraigning. He continued: "The evidence is conclusive and I'm not sure but I ought to send myself to jail for ten days. But, as this is my first offense, and I certainly had a good [illegible]

DIED IN JAIL.—Yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Henry Welcher, an inmate of the county jail, serving out a sentence of nine months on three charges of larceny, died very suddenly. He was engaged in washing a shirt in a tub of water when he suddenly raised himself up, threw his arms out and fell back on the floor of the corridor dead. It is supposed that death was caused by heart disease. The Coroner will hold an inquest to-day.—Standard 20th inst.
