THE BIG SCARE.

The big scare given the citizens of Roseburg last Friday night, when it was reported that a mob of 200 or less of the irate citizens of Oak Creek was imminent, has subsided, and all the imaginary blood shed, conflagration and general wreck and ruin to follow in its train, has died an easy death and the hystericky old women, the timid maidens, the cowardly swains and the bold and daring members of Co. A., O. N. G., can now breathe easier. It is reported that several bold, brave and daring young men—not members of the O. N. G.—got their cayuses saddled and, ready to—meet the mob? Not a bit of it; but upon the first clang of the fire bell, to mount and make the distance between them and the mob as wide as whips and spurs could possibly make it, on the supposition that,

"He who from danger runs away,
May live to fight some other day."

Upon inquiry saturday morning of persons in town from the locality from which it was reported a mob was forming Friday, it was learned there was nothing in it. No mob was threatened by the good people of that neighborhood. Two or three irresponsible young bloods had been heard to remark that "Dixon ought to be mobbed." That was the amount of the proposed mob. The men of responsibility in that section would not give countenance to any such doings.

But the report that a mob was in contemplation by the people in the neighborhood of the homicide caused a big scare here and put the conservators of law and order upon the watch, after having made arrangements to meet the socalled mob with a repellant force if need be. But the officers "did their vigils keep" all Friday night till near the "wee sma' hours." And when the aurora of morn illumined the eastern horizon, and the king of day shot his golden rays upon mountain tops, they found Roseburg safe from any impending injury to person or property, and they "turned in" and rested from the big scare of a few hours before. All is well that ends well, especially as regards this reported mob. It is claimed that this report of a mob being organized was done for an ultimate effect, viz: To show that there is a strong current of popular sentiment there against Dixon. However, this may or may not be the case, it is certain no demonstration of that character was made.

Party At Edenbower.

There was a very pleasant gathering of some of the young people of Roseburg at the pleasant home of Miss Ada Smith in Edenbower last Friday evening. It was indeed a swell affair. The entertainment furnished by this charming young hostess consisted chiefly in games and pleasant converse, and all around rejoicing fun. Only two casualities are reported. A young ladv fell out of the bay window; second, no one was drowned in the Umpqua river. The party was taken out by George Montague in his hack. But the best part of the entertainment was the strawberries and cream and cake. And when we say cream we mean just that. And the regal manner in the young hostes presided gave relish to the elegant repast and made us wish for more frequent invitations to her home. Those present were: Misses Mary Dilworth, Della Brown, Clara McCoy, Elva Wimberly, Maud Rast, Lena Hodson, Clyde Gaddis, Messrs. Walter McKenzie, Walter Faulkner, Nathan Fullerton, George Johnson, Warren McWilliams, Earl Gaddis, Elmer Wimberly Sam Josephson, and Robert Wilcox.
