The editor of this paper was considerably surprised and much pleased, on last Friday, to meet on the street, Mr. A. Ritchie, an old friend and neighbor, in Elderado, Kansas, some sixteen or seventeen years ago. Mr. Ritchie's home is now in Norman, Oklahoma. Last April his only son left him and enlisted in the first United States Cavalry. He was ordered to Cuba, where he was engaged in the fighting around Santiago, being severly wounded and lost a leg. Mr. Ritchie being alone concluded to see a little of the world himself. So on April 23rd, he hitched up his team and started West, passing through Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming Idaho and Washington, and thus far into Oregon on his way to California, where he expects to winter, returning home next summer. He has been well, and has enjoyed the trip immensely. We had a pleasant visit with him talking over old times and mutual friends.

Major C. Qualman, of the Southern Pacific Railroad Co., was in the city on business of his company last week. The Major has a military experience extending over a great many years. He was born in Germany and when a young man he received his first military training in that country. When the civil war broke out in America his father advised him to come to the United States and offer his services where he would have an opportunity to make a reputation for himself in his chosen profession. He knew nothing in regard to the causes of the war, nor in regard to which side was right in the controversy. If he had landed in New Orleans, he would have joined the Confederates, but having landed at New York, he cast his lot with the Federals. After having landed he hastened to Indianapolis where he had friends. The 3rd Indiana Cavalry was being enlisted and he enlisted as a private in Co. D. The captain of the company was a pork packer, and knew no more about military tatics than he did about navigating a ship. It soon became known that private Qualman knew something about military matters and he was soon appointed as a non-commissioned officer, from which rank he rose to that of major of his regiment. At the close of the war he was commissioned second lieutenant in the 4th cavalry of the regular army, where he served 17 years. We were much interested in his history and experience, for the reason that two of our brothers served in the regiment of which he was major, from February 1862 to February, 1865.

Bright Prospects.

The mining outlook for Josephine county and for Southern Oregon was never brighter than it is at present. The hotels are crowded with men who have come here to look over our mineral resources and invest. And they are men who have had experience in mining all through the West. These men come here and are captivated with our climate and natural resources. They find timber in abundance and numerous water courses which only need the controlling hand of man to make them furnish power for driving machinery, electric lighting, etc., conditions which are not excelled in any mining region on the face of the globe.

It has long been said that the mines of Southern Oregon did not "go down." That is a misstatement. It was the miner that did not "go down." But there is much to be said in favor of the miner, after all. He could make good wages working the surface, and why should he go down? The miner has come to realize, however, that the deeper down he is on his lead the more he can get for his property.

A gentleman from California who came here and bought a mine said one reason why he came here was that with $10,000 to $15,000 he could buy a mine that would be a producer almost from the start, while in California it took $150,000 or more and two years before a mine became a paying property. Of course he was speaking of the mother lode.—Grants Pass Mining Journal.

The Election Frauds.

SALEM, Or., Oct. 15.—All of the men arrested last night in connection with the Marion county election frauds were arraigned before Judge Burnett in the circuit court this morning. Each asked for statutory one day in which to enter his plea. As the expiration of one day will fall on Sunday, their pleas will not be made until Monday. Following arraignment of the defendants were re-arrested on two similar charges.

The seven indictments on which the arrests were made last night each charged tampering with the election returns of Monitor precinct, by marking the tally-sheet of that precinct so as to make it appear that P. D'Arcy' candidate for circuit judhe, received 10 more votes than were cast for him. One set of the indictments on which today's arrests were made alleges similar tampering with the returns of Mount Angel precinct by marking the tally-sheet of that precinct so as to make D'Arcy's vote appear 10 greater than it really was.

Another set of indictments alleges with the returns of Butteville precinct by attempting to make D'Arcy's vote 20 more than he received.

Each defendant's bond was fixed at $500 on each of the indictments. The bands were accepted, and defendants were re-arraigned in the afternoon. Their trial was set for October 31.

DEATH OF MRS. GEER

Wife of the Governor-Elect a Victim of Heart Trouble.

OMAHA, Oct. 13.—Mrs. Sarah J. Geer, wife of T. T. Geer, governor-elect of Oregon, died suddenly at an early hour this morning at her appartments in the Barker hotel, from heart failure, succeeding an attack of asthma. Mr. Geer started for Salem this afternoon with the remains.

Mrs. Geer arrived in the city with her husband Tuesday evening, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Wright, and Mr. Wright, of Union. Mrs. Geer was greatly fatigued by the journey and remained at the hotel to rest. Wednesday she felt better, but did not go out.

Last night the weather was very disagreeable, and probably affected her. She was attacked by her old trouble, and a physician was summoned, who stayed the alarming symptoms by administering morphine hypedermically.

Towards midnight Mrs. Geer rested easier, and later fell into an easy slumber. Mr. Geer gave his wife some medicine about 1 o'clock, and soon he himself dozed off. Mrs. Geer evidently passed away while peacefully sleeping, as no sound was heard from her.

At the breaking of dawn Mr. Geer awoke, and was horrified to find, when he touched his wife's hand, that it was cold and stiff. Help was quickly summoned, but it was found Mrs. Geer was long past assistance. It is supposed she expired about 2:30 o'clock.

Many messages of condolence were received from Oregon by the bereaved husband, among them being from Governor Lord and Mr. Geer's chief political opponent, Will R. King.

The News at the Geer Home.

SALEM, Oct. 13.—Fred Geer this morning received the following dispatch from his father, Governor elect T. T. Geer, at Omaha:

"The worst has come. Your mother is dead. Bear up. Will bring her home."

The message came by way of Salem, and upon receipt here was sent immediately to the Geer children at the farm home, eight miles east.

Mrs. Geer had not been in good health for several years, but death at this time was unexpected. With a view of benefitting her health a trip to the Omaha exposition was planned, and, accompanied by the governor-elect, they left their home on the journey. They stopped in Portland to attend the wedding of a daughter. Since their departure from Portland no word had been received from the party until the telegram of today arrived. Mrs. Geer's trouble was of an asthmatic nature. At the time of starting on the trip she was apparently somewhat improved.

The surviving children are Mrs. Harry Cook, Mrs. Harry Cooper, Mrs. Harry Downing and Fred Geer. She was a sister of Fred, Charles and Richard Duncan, Mrs. Dunham Wright, Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. H. J. Geer, all of Union county.

The remains are not expected to reach here before next Monday. Mrs. Geer's father and mother were buried at the Eoff cemetery near Macleay, and her remains will probably be interred there.

Lester Wright Injured.

On last Friday night Brakeman Lester Wright was seriously injured at Ruckles in some manner as yet unknown. The freight on which Wright was acting as head brakeman was ordered to pull in on the siding to allow the northbound overland to pass and Conductor Ed Tynan sent Wright ahead to flag the overland. As the overland passed the point where Wright had gone, Conductor Huston noticed him lying at the side of the track and as he passed the freight he notified Tynan of the fact. On investigation the brakeman was found lying by the side of the track in an unconscious condition, his head in a pool of blood.

The only reasonable theory by which the injury can be accounted for is that he was attacked by tramps, swarms of whom are found at every station and clinging to every train. This theory is strengthened by the fact that his revolver was found near him with the handle broken.

He was brought to Roseburg where his injuries were examined by Dr. Twitchell. It was found that the injured man had received a blow on the head back of the right ear, which had caused considerable hemorrhages from the mouth and ears. There was, however, no fracture of the skull so far as could be ascertained.

The patient was taken to the hospital at Portland on Sunday morning's overland. Up to that time he had not regained consciousness sufficiently to give any account of the manner in which his injuries were received. It is believed by his physicians that he will recover unless some unfavorable conditions should develop a contingency which is not expected.
