How To Pronounce Guam.

There was no discordant hum
When the Spaniards gave us Guam.
Outwardly they all seemed calm
As they handed over Guam.
Carefully they'd read their doom
Where the protocol says Guam;
And the proof in torrents came
When they murmured, "Here's your Guam."

Let us turn be thankful to 'em
'Cause they up and gave us Guam.

Drain News.

(From The Watchman.)

Another lot of live hogs were shipped from this place this week by some of the enterprising Elkton farmers.

H. E. Smith, District Grand Master United Ar isan, is in the city, with a view to organizing a lodge of that order here.

Rev. W. S. Gordon, assisted by the evangelist, Rev. Bryen, is conducting a series of meetings in Yoncalla this week.

Miss Mae Cowan, who has had charge of the Victor school, is now a victim of the measles and is at the home of Mrs. Bashman in that district. Perle Sevier has charge of the school during her illness.

Miss Eva Gardner is stopping at Hotel McCallister and will take advantage of the excellent opportunity afforded by the Normal school, to take a course in instrumental music the coming winter.

Clarence Ardant killed a large catamount a few days ago on Mr. John Andrews' place a few miles north of Hudson. Uncle John feels quite elated over the early demise of this sheep-killing animal.

Hon. Benton Miner is home from Idaho, where he has been the past six months, and will visit a few days with his family at the place. It is a real pleasure to hear Mr. Miner praise our delightful climate as compared with the frosty regions of Idaho, and he only speaks the truth when he says "we have the best climate on earth."

Fred Bahl, of The Dalles, is a guest of relatives at Hotel McCallister. He expects to remain here the coming winter.

The many friends of Miss Mattie Blain will be sorry to learn that she has lost the sight entirely of one eye, and is fearful of losing the other.

Miss Effie Cowan returned home from Yoncalla Wednesday. She has just recovered from an attack of measles, and is now able to re-enter school again.

Nitrogenous Crops.

Interview with Secretary Wilson. "Speaking of Europe, Mr. Secretary, what to you think of that country as a market for corn? Secretary Rusk, you know, sent an agent into Europe to introduce it there. They nicknamed him Corn Meal Murphy. Mr. Murphy estimated that we could easily increase the value of our corn crop at least $100,000,000 a year by foreign demand."

"That is all imagination," replied Secretary Wilson. "I don't believe a word of it. The European farmers don't want our corn, for they know that corn is very poor in nitrogenous matter. It does not make good manure. The percentage of nitrogen in corn is only about 1 to 10, while flax and cottonseed meal are almost half nitrogen. The European farmers have to have feed that will enrich their lands. So they import the refuse of our oil mills by the thousands of tons. Did you ever realize that we are the great paint users of the globe? We use more paint than any other people, and we import quantities of flaxseed from Indian and other countries to make linseed oil. Much of the refuse of this seed goes to Europe. The farmers there understand its value, and we, who ought to keep it, let it go. We, on the other hand import nothing from Europe that adds to our material wealth. One of our chief imports, for instance, is sugar. This is largely made up of starch. Now, the starchy elements of plants come from the air. Sugar is not good for manure. You might cover a field two feet deep with sugar, and it would not raise a crop. Still we pay other countries more than $100,000,000 a year for air. Think of it."

American Soldier's Idea of Justice.

A story concerning our troops in Manila is by an English naval officer, who was an eye-witness to the occurrence. "The city was quite crowded," he says, "with both American and Spanish soldiers, and they seemed to be on the friendliest terms. As I was crossing one of the numerous bridges across the Pasig river I saw a native Filipino spit in the face of a Spanish officer, and then run to the American sentinel, who was guarding the bridge, demanding his protection. It was some before the Filipino could make himself understood, and the sentry took some time to catch on to what had been done, but you can imagine my surprise when he handed his gun to the Spanish officer and caught the native by the nape of the neck and the seat of his trousers and pitched him off the bridge into the Pasig river. Then he calmly took his gun from the Spanish officer and began pacing the beat as if nothing had happened. The American soldier may not be so military as his brother of Europe, but he is made of the right stuff."—Argonaut.

According to the Lakeview Examiner reports from that section regarding the gloomy outlook for the stockraising interests during the coming winter have been greatly overdrawn. While a dry summer has prevailed outside stock is in good condition, and feeding will probably not be required before the first of the year, so that all stockmen will come out with fair profits in the spring.

A Poetic Attorney.

Anderson, Ind., Nov. 21.—The attorney for the defendant in a case in the circuit court served notice that he would present his argument in poetry. The attorneys for the plaintiff protested, and the court arose in dignity and said that he would not admit poetical arguments.

The matter led to an argument about the right to employ poetry in law, and it was found there was no precedents of statutes against such a method, and the poetical attorney was obdurate. The court retired to let the case proceed on the basis, and it was postponed until January 2. The attorney for the defense insists that he will present and argue his case in rhyme, and there seems to be no way to hold him off.

And it was not a good day for story telling, either, as the following will show: "A Kansas young man climbed a corn stalk last Monday to see how the ears were getting along, and now the corn is growing up faster than he can climb down. Three men have undertaken to cut down the stalk, but owing to its rapid growth it is feared they will not succeed in time to prevent the young man's death by starvation. He is subsisting on raw corn and has already thrown down four bushels of cobs and it is now thought that his supply is almost exhausted."
