McEwen, the magician and hypnotist, performs nightly to an enthusiastic audience at the opera house. He has demonstrated to those who have volunteered to go on the stage to be hypnotized, as well as those in the audience, that hypnotism is a fact. He called on persons from the audience to come on the stage and many willing persons readily complied, developing into good subjects. Everyone who doubts his ability should go to the opera house any evening and be convinced of the reality. McEwen can easily explain what hypnotism is and carry out all the facts pertaining to hypnotism.
