THE GRANT COUNTY NEWS.

March 10, 1892.

The Alliance Advocate is doing the farmers of Washington good service in warning them of the folly of allowing vast sums of money, much of it paid by farmers themselves, to go to the states east of the mountains for butter, eggs, bacon, lard and other agricultural products.

Chinese are not a desirable class of citizens, and the Chinese government ought not to expect us to allow her subjects to come here by thousands, without remonstrating. This government invites immigration of desirable classes from all lands, but China does not send this class of subjects to our shores, and those who would come need expect no other reception than that they receive.

The Louisville Courier Journal says: It costs fifty cents to produce seventy five cents worth of silver. It costs eight cents to produce six-cent cotton, but, strange to say, while we have innumerable bills offered in congress to increase the value of silver, no man has offered a bill to increase the price of cotton. Can we not have the government buy the surplus product of the cotton fields? The cotton planters are in greater need of relief than are the silver producers, and they are a far more useful class.

At a funeral down in Georgia the other day the preacher found himself in an embarassing position. The deceased had been such a tough customer that the good parson knew not what to say. After due deliberation he concluded to appeal to the audience, and said: "Will some good brother or sister come forward and say something;" Thrice did this pathetic appeal fall upon barren ears. At last an old farmer in the back part of the house rose slowly and said: "If it would be in order I would like to offer a few remarks on the subtreasury plan."

It is to be hoped that congress will show its contempt for the silly vaporings of this gentry by passing an exclusion law that will exclude, and not be satisfied until Chinese are effectually shut out. There is a lot of gust about discrimination. Isn't it about time to discriminate? Are we to allow this country to be flooded with an unlimited number of Chinese paupers, just to keep from hurting China's feelings? If we are going to respect anybody's feelings, let it be our own. China has never shown any respect for our feelings and on the principle of reciprocity we are not obliged to show any respect for China. As for discrimination, it cannot be said that this government discriminates against China half enough.

An exchange says that "a canal from New York to Florida seems like a strange proposition, yet such an enterprise is being seriously discussed. Its route would be across New Jersey to the Delaware river, across Delaware to Chesapeake bay, through the Dismal Swamp in Virginia, across Albemarle and Pamlico sounds, thence across South Carolina and through the island-locked waterways of Georgia to Jacksonville, Florida. Professor Haupt, of the University of Pennsylvania, earnestly advocates the scheme, and he has deeply interested the board of trade and the business men of New York in the project. It would be a great lumber and timber route northward, as it would be much safer than the sea voyage, and would traverse vast timber resources."

Assessor Sears, of Multnomah, puts in a strong plea for a little better treatment of county assessors. He would like to see the law amended so that assessors would make all needed copies of their rolls instead of the county clerks. He justly claims that assessors and their deputies are familiar with the rolls and if allowed to copy them would be able to correct any errors the original might contain. Besides it would give assessors employment between assessments, and better still, the work would be done after allowing good wages to the assessors, at about one tenth the price allowed by law to the clerks. "Last year," said Mr. Sears, "I made $1,600 for my year's work, while the clerk got $2,300 for making two copies that took him only two weeks to finish. Of course the clerk employed a number of hands to do the work but there is no sense or reason or justice in making such discrimination in the wages of two offices which require, at least, equal clerical ability."
