Ancestry of the Horse. Professor Lydekker, in Knowledge and Scientific News, discusses, some detail, the origin of the modern norse. He finds that the horse of neolithic times was not specifically distinct from the horse of the present. While there is no doubt that the horse of that period was used by man for as early as 1900 B. C. These were excels any other hotel on the contilong-maned, more like the Arab horses nent: and came from Assyria. Where the Assyrians obtained them is unknown, but it was probably from southern Asia, where this long-maned breed has been developed, in all probability, as the result of long-continued domestication. Our modern horse is a cross between these two breeds, with a further mixture of the Arab horse. This Arab horse, too, was itself a descendant of the earlier long-maned horse. The origin of the long-maned horse is a matter of doubt, but Professor Lydakker thinks it may have been from extinct Indian species.

THE MORMON TEMPLE.

The Mormon temple at Salt Lake of that period was used by man for food, there seems to be no conclusive evidence as to whether it was domesticated or not. His own opinion, however, is that it was probably domesticated. The horse of that time was closely allied to the tarpan, or semi-wild horse, that lived in southern Russia up to a century ago. This was a sia up to a century ago. This was a wind horse, that lived in southern Russia up to a century ago. This was a wind attractive hotel west of New York.
