AT THE THEATRES

ROMEO AND JULIET.

From the point of dramatic construction, many critics regard the final scenes of "Romeo and Juliet" as more perfect than any of Shakespeare's tragedies. Romeo has been banished from Verona for killing Tybalt. Juliet has been compelled by her family to betroth herself to young Paris, a kinsman of Escalus, king of Verona. In order to distract her from the grief which she is supposed to feel at the death of her cousin Tybalt, the marriage is fixed at an early date. The distracted Juliet comes to her father confessor, Friar Lawrence, for advice. She has a dagger in her hand and proposes to slay herself, as the only way to escape the dreaded marriage with Paris. The friar undertakes the desperate remedy of providing her with a potion the effect whereof is to render her apparently cold and lifeless for 42 hours, leading her family into the belief that she is dead. It comes to pass as he has promised and Juliet is buried in the tomb of the Capulets. An accident prevents the friar from communicating with Romeo, who, hearing of Juliet's death, bursts upon the tomb, takes poison and dies. Juliet awakes from her trance, finds Romeo's corpse, stabs herself with his dagger, and dies. The crowning point is the reconciliation of Capulet and Montague over the dead bodies of their children.

Scott Seaton, who plays Capulet in the Columbia company's presentation, has won new admirers for his splendid interpretation of that role. The best work Mr. Seaton has done in Portland is the scene in which he denounces his daughter, Juliet, for her refusal to marry Paris. In this scene, also, Miss Countiss rises to a great height and Miss Angus is seen at her best as Lady Capulet.

"GLITTERING GLORIA" IS NEW.

"Glittering Gloria" is said to be the most successful creation in recent years. When presented last spring at Daly's theatre, New York, it duplicated the success it achieved in London. In the evolution of its plot, which is charmingly entertaining, it deals with a phase of life, a phase that is of vast importance, that of an actress securing a $25,000 necklace, regardless of how it was to be gotten.

The scenery attracts, its actors convince, its comedy amuses. It is a real comedy, which requires many clever people to interpret it, and Messrs. Fisher and Ryley have exercised much judgment in securing this. Foremost is Miss Isadore Rush, the clever comedienne, who was last seen here as Lady Holyrood in "Florodora." In the part of Gloria it is said she has a part which gives her ample opportunity to display her talents. The rest of the cast includes George Parsons, Wilton Heriot, Edward M. Favor, Bert Clark, Channes Olney, Lulu Louden, J. Gunnis Davis, Thomas A. Kiernan, Irma Davis, George Jackson and W. S. Freeman. Two performances only will be given at the Marquam Grand theatre next Friday night and Saturday matinee, October 28 and 29. Seats are now selling.

FRANK DANIELS COMING.

Frank Daniels will come to the Marquam Grand theatre next Monday and Tuesday nights, October 31 and November 1, under the management of Charles B. Dillingham, and offer to his many local admirers his very latest laughing vehicle, "The Office Boy," a musical comedy by Harry B. Smith, with music by the clever composer, Ludwig Englander. The piece is interpreted, from all accounts, by a large company of talented and vocally excellent artists. A typical Daniels chorus of attractive femininity, garbed in dashing and bewitching style, is one of the promised allurements. The staging of the piece, also, is spoken of as being up to the highest standard of the scene-painters' art. The fun of the piece is said to be uninterrupted from the time Mr. Daniels makes his first appearance from an office safe, until the final fall of the curtain. The advance sale of seats will open next Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

CROWDS AT THE BAKER.

So great was the crowd after the first evening performance at the Baker last night, a solid quarter of an hour was necessary to empty the theatre and allow the multitude to file in and get seats. The bill at the Baker this week is undoubtedly the greatest vaudeville offering made in Portland. Ten star acts hold the stage and each one noteworthy. From good old Pete Baker down to the biograph the applause is hearty and unstinted. If one wants to see the greatest vaudeville bill ever offered in the northwest, the Baker is the place to go.

ALPINE FAMILY GREAT.

In accordance with their promise, the managers of the Star theatre have improved on the great vaudeville bill of last week by giving Portland the most expensive vaudeville program ever presented in this city. There is not a cheap act on the list, and each one is not only high-priced, but also the limit of artistic excellence. The Alpine family performs wonders, while Howe and Edwards have a refined and sidesplitting act. The three Renos are individual hits, and Louis Mendenhall is the greatest violin virtuoso ever heard in a vocal vaudeville house.

LYRIC'S GOOD BILL.

Each week the Lyric tries to outdo the preceding one. This week a bill is presented that can compete with the best. The Malcolms, in their wonderful globe-rolling turn, are treating Portland vaudeville-goers to something genuinely good. Falarado astounds his audiences with his wonderful voice. Comedians, dancers and songsters complete the bill in great array. The vitascope is showing the moonshiners for another week. Popular demand decreed it.

LAST PERFORMANCE TONIGHT.

That funny farce comedy, "A Friend of the Family," which has been pleasing the theatre-goers of Portland at the Marquam Grand theatre the past two evenings, will be seen for the last time tonight. This clever comedy is filled with more laughable situations than any farce that ever came to the coast, and interpreted as it is, by a capable company of players, makes an excellent evening's entertainment.

DUEL AT BIJOU.

Three acts that stand out from the ordinary are at the Bijou this week. Lane and Bustsetta, who fight a duel with Roman swords, and then do some marvelous cannon-ball juggling, give a performance to be remembered. Stick and Stone jump in and out of barrels and do some of the most laughable of acrobatic tricks. The vitascope shows the Holland submarine boat firing a torpedo.

ARCADE'S GOOD BILL.

It is a laugh from start to finish when Gillen and Gillen are on the stage at the Arcade. The Bradfords dance and entertain steadily, and Beatrice Lorne has the best operatic voice that has thrilled Arcadians. The Baldwin team is up to snuff, and the bioscope presents comical motion pictures. It is a well-balanced bill, without a weak act in the lot, and there is novelty, fun and dexterity creeping into the program at every turn. The pioneer vaudeville house has an entertainment of exceptional merit this week.

A Great Attraction.

Don't miss hearing Pete Baker at the Baker this week. Pete in his German parts and songs is known from coast to coast. Undoubtedly the greatest yodler on the vaudeville stage today.
