Тик Мізеопат Сомраоміян.—We had o casion recently to look over the volume of Niles Register which contained the passage of the Missouri Compromise, and read with interest the following editorial comments of that journal on the event which had just occurred. They show that the Compromise was regarded as a finality, and little less binding than a provision of the Constitution:

"The votes on this question conclusively prove that a large majority in both houses were of opinion that Congress holds a con-atitutional right to inhibit slavery in the territories of the United States, without their original limits; though many, adverse to the restriction on Missouri, may have thought it inexpedient to impose such restriction. The territory north of 384 degrees north latitude is 'FOREVER' forbidden to be peopled with slaves, except in the State of Missouri. The right, then, to inhibit slavery in any of the territories is clearly and completely acknowledged, and it is conditioned as to some of them that even when they become States slavery shall be forever prohibited in them. There is no hardship in this; the territories bement may rightfully prescribe the terms on which it will dispose of the public lands. This great point was agreed to in the Senate, 33 votes to 11, and in the House 139 to 37*; and we trust that it is determined 'forever' with respect to the countries now subject to the legislation of the general government. It is true the Compromise is supported only by the letter of the law, repealable by the power which enacted it; but the circumstances of the case give to this law a moral force equal to that of a positive provision of the Constitution, and we do not hazard anything by saying that the Constitution exists in its observance."

*Of the forty-two gentlemen who voted against the Compromise in the House of Representatives, Mesers, Adams and Allen of Massachusetts, Buff-um, Folger, and Gross of New York, did so because they were in favor of an entire restriction on all the country west of the Mississipp, except in the State of Louisiana; and the thirty-seven others united with the proceeding because opposed to any restriction whatever.

£5 I remember that Adam Smith and Gibbon had told us that there would never again be a destruction of civilization by barbarians. The flood, they said, would no more return to cover the earth; and they seemed to reason justly, for they compared the immense strength of the civilized part with that which remained savage, and asked from whence were to come those Huns, and from whence were to come those Vandals, who were again to destroy divilization.

Alas! it did not occur to them that, in the very heart of great capitals, in the very neighborhood of splendid palaces, and churches, and theatres, and libraries, and with that which remained savage, and askchurches, and theatres, and libraries, and museums, vice and ignorance, and misery might produce a race of Huns fiercer than those who marched under Attila, and Vandals more bent on destruction than those who followed Genseric .- Macaulay.

who followed Genseric.—Macaulay.

Cost of Our Army.—The Army appropriation bill, now before Congress, requires for the support of the army for the year ending the 30th of June, 1857, no less than $12,124,297. Add to this about a million and a half more embraced in the deficiency bill passed not long since, and the aggregate expense attending the maintenance of our army for twelve months is nearly fourteen millions of dollars. Some of the items may be interesting. Pay of the army, $3,275. be interesting. Pay of the army, $3,275, 170; subsistence, $1,089,834; quartermasters' supplies, $1,010,000; transportation, $1,500,000 : commutation of officers

When he rose, he had a chapter of the Hebrew Bible read for him, and then, with, of course, the intervention of breakfast, studied till twelve. He then dined; took some exercise for an hourgenerally in a chair, in which he used to swing himself-and afterwards played on the organ, or on the bassvoil, and either sang himself or made his wife sing, who had a good voice but no ear. He then resumed his studies till six, from which hour till eight, he conversed with those who came to visit him. He finally took a light supper, smoked a pipe of tobacco, and drank a glass of water, after which he retired to rest .- Knightly's Milton.

A CAIRO FEAST .- Peck, says the editor of a New Orleans paper, invited us down to take dinner with him the other day, and we went. For the benefit of those may hereafter want to know where to find good eating and plenty of it—such as it is —we give Peck's bill of fare:

1st. Catfish soup.
2d. One huge catfish, with estush sauce.
3d. A small catfish stuffed.

4th. Several catfish not stuffed.

5th. Some fried catfish. 6th. Carfish "omlet." mixed.

7th. Scrambled catfish-great variety-very good. 5th. A large number of very small catfish.

9th. A few catfish. 10th. Some more catfish.

There were quite a number of dishes besides, but all contained catfish, done up in every style the heart can wish. The dinner was "interspread" with a few crackers and bad jokes. Long may Peck wave.

The bogus Jo. is preaching Mormon sermons by the wayside to assembled miscellaneous audiences.

"Miss S. Napp, I've been to learn how to tell fortunes," said a young fellow to a brisk brunette. "Just let me have your hand if you please." "La! Mr. A., how sudden you are! Well, go and ask pa."

Decidenty Coot -A Frenchman was tried th Dictivative Coot.—A Frenchman wastried the other day in one of the departments for having killed his father and mother. The crime was committed under the most revolting circumstances, and at the end of the pleadings, when he was about to be condemned to death, the president of the tribunal asked the usual question, if he had savthing to say in his defines. "No. M. le President," he replied, "only I hope you will have pity on a poor orphan!"—English paper.
