WEATHER REPORT.

The storm central off the Washington coast has advanced slowly inland and is this morning central near Vancouver Island. It has caused rain in northwestern Oregon and western Washington and increasing winds along the coast. Southeast storm warnings announcing the approach of this storm were ordered displayed at 7:15 a. m. at all seaports in this district. Fresh to strong southeast winds will prevail on the inland navigable waters of western Washington tonight and Saturday, with fresh to strong southeast, shifting to south-west, gales along the coast and at sea. With the eastward movement of the storm rain will occur in all portions of the north Pacific states, with rising temperature tonight in eastern Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

The southwest "low" continues to cause rain in southern California, Arizona and southern Utah, while a disturbance off the north Atlantic coast has caused rain at scattered places in the New England states and in eastern New York, eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland and eastern Virginia. In the southern and central portions of the United States fair weather prevails.
