WEATHER REPORT.

The disturbance yesterday over Nevada and southwestern Idaho has moved rapidly northeastward and increased in energy. The center of the main disturbance is now over southern Minnesota and a second depression is central over eastern Colorado. Heavy snows have fallen in eastern Oregon, eastern Washington, Idaho, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin and northern Michigan, and moderately heavy rains have fallen in California, Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Iowa, Illinois and the Ohio valley and lower lake region.

It is much colder this morning in the intermountain states, but the temperatures west of the Cascade mountains did not fall so low as expected, owing to the presence of a new disturbance, which is now apparently central off Cape Flattery and will move inland during the next 24 hours and cause rain or snow in this district, with no decided change in temperature.
