WEATHER REPORT.

The barometer is low along the entire international boundary line, with one center of depression northeast of Lake Huron and another one, evidently of decided character, off the Washington coast. Storm warnings are continued at all stations in this district for a strong southerly gale at sea and for a moderate southerly gale on inland navigable waters.

Light rains have fallen in Washington, northern Idaho and in the northern states east of the Mississippi river. It is much warmer in the north Pacific states, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, the Dakotas, northern New Mexico, the Texas panhandle and in New England and the middle Atlantic states, and correspondingly cooler in the Mississippi and Ohio valleys.

The indications are for rain in this district tonight and Friday.

Observations taken at 5 a. m., Pacific time:
